Sir:

I will be out of town next week, and so wanted to provide you my initial thoughts.

- The piece is superb.
- If anything, the Director may wish to add a sentence or two in his conclusion about the FBI's obligations more generally. In other words, something not specifically about this case, but about what the FBI aims to do in all of our cases. He could do this after the first sentence in his last paragraph. For example, something like:

"The American people entrust the FBI with impartially investigating all matters of crime involving people from all walks of life. We take that obligation extremely seriously, and" I can assure you that this investigation was done competently, honestly, and independently. No outside influence of any kind was brought to bear. I know there were many opinions expressed by people who were not part of the investigation -- including people in government -- but none of that mattered to us. Opinions are irrelevant, and they were all uninformed by insight into our investigation, because we did the investigation in a professional way. Only facts matter, and the FBI found them here in an entirely apolitical and professional way. I couldn't be prouder to be part of this organization.

I suggest this only to emphasize the point that this investigation was conducted in a manner consistent with the fairness aims of all of our investigations, (i.e., no one is above the law, etc.).

- The piece contains information that indicates the Secretary did not meet federal record requirements. Before deciding on the final wording of such information, the Director may wish to have someone study the impact his statements could have on any/all administrative inquiries relative to federal record obligations. I suggest this only so he's aware of any potential fallout in that regard. I assume such administrative inquiries aren't really a big deal, but if I was him I'd just want to be certain before deciding on the final wording.
- I saw two typos on page 4, which I highlighted in red and yellow.

Thank you for sharing the below with me.

Folks:

The Director composed the below straw man in an effort to compose what a "final" statement might look like in the context of a press conference. This was really more of an exercise for him to get his thoughts on the matter in order, and not any kind of decision about venue, strategy, product, etc.

The Director asked me to share this with you four, but not any further. The only additional people who have seen this draft are Jim Rybicki and Jim Baker. Please do not disseminate or discuss any further.

I do not know if the boss will want to discuss this at the Monday update but please review it before the meeting just in case.

Thanks

I've been trying to imagine what it would look like if I decided to do an FBI only press event to close out our work and hand the matter to DOJ. To help shape our discussions of whether that, or something different, makes sense, I have spent some time crafting what I would say, which follows. In my imagination, I don't see me taking any questions. Here is what it might look like:

Good afternoon folks. I am here to give you an update on our investigation of Secretary Clinton's use of a private email system, which began in late Augustmid-July.

After a tremendous amount of work, the FBI has completed its investigation and has referred the case to the Department of Justice for a prosecutive decision. What I would like to do today is tell you three things: (1) what we did; (2) what we found; (3) what we have recommended to DOJ.

But I want to start by thanking the many agents, analysts, technologists, and other FBI employees who did work of extraordinary quality in this case. Once you have a better sense of how much we have done, you will understand why I am so grateful and proud of their efforts.

So, first: what we have done over the last eight months.

The investigation began as a referral from the Intelligence Community Inspector General in connection with Secretary Clinton's use of a private email server during her time as Secretary of State, focused on whether classified information was transmitted on that private system.

Commented [p1]: Consider whether it is more appropriate to call this a "personal" or "privately-owned" email server. "Private" may denote a commercial email service, such as gmail or hotmail. Use of these private commercial services was widespread at State before and during her tenure.

Our investigation focused on whether there is evidence that classified information was improperly stored or transmitted on that private system, in violation of a federal statute that makes it a felony to mishandle classified information either intentionally or in a grossly negligent way, or a second statute that makes it a misdemeanor to knowingly remove classified information from appropriate systems or storage facilities.

Consistent with our counterintelligence responsibilities, we have also investigated to determine whether there is evidence of computer intrusion in connection with the private email server by any foreign power, or hackers on behalf of a foreign power.

I have so far used the singular term, “email server,” in describing the referral that began our investigation. It turns out to have been more complicated than that. Secretary Clinton used several different servers and ~~providers-administrators~~ of those servers during her four years at the State Department, and used numerous mobile devices to view and send email on that private domain. As new servers and equipment s and providers were employed, older servers were taken out of service, stored, and decommissioned in various ways. Piecing all of that back together to gain as full an understanding as possible of the ways in which private email was used for government work has been a painstaking undertaking, requiring thousands of hours of effort.

For example, when one of Secretary Clinton’s original private servers was decommissioned in 2013~~xx~~, the email software was removed. Doing that didn’t remove the email content, but it was like removing the frame from a huge finished jigsaw puzzle and dumping the pieces on the floor. The effect was that millions of email fragments end up unsorted in the server’s un-used – or “slack” – space. We searched went through all of it to see what was there, and what parts of the puzzle could be put back together.

Commented [p2]:

FBI investigators have also read all ~~34,000~~of the approximately 30,000 emails provided by Secretary Clinton to the State Department in ~~spring 2015~~December 2014. Where an email was assessed as possibly containing classified information, the FBI referred the email to ~~the any~~ U.S. government agency that was ~~the a~~ likely “owner” of the information in the email so that agency could make a determination as to whether the email contained classified information at the time it was sent or received, or whether there was reason to classify the email now, even if its content was not classified at the time it was sent (this is the process sometimes referred to as “up classifying”).

Commented [p3]: Some emails were sent to multiple agencies.

From that group of ~~34,000~~30,000 emails that had been returned to the State Department in late 2014~~5~~, ~~the FBI sent xxxx emails to agencies for classification determinations.~~ ~~Of those,~~ xxxx have been determined by the owning agency to contain classified information at the time they were sent or received. Xxxx of those contained information that was Top Secret at the time they were sent; xxxx contained Secret information at the time; and xxxx contained Confidential information. Separate from those, a total of xxxx additional emails were “up

Commented [p4]: Ultimately, the number of emails determined to be classified will be a small percentage of those sent for review. We think this point will need to be addressed by explaining that we took an overly expansive and generous position in deciding what to send out for review.

classified” to make them Secret or Confidential; the information in those had not been classified at the time the emails were sent.

The FBI also discovered ~~xxxx~~ several thousand work-related emails that were not in the group of ~~34,000~~30,000 that were returned by Secretary Clinton to State in 2014~~5~~. We found those additional emails in a variety of ways. Some had been deleted over the years and we found traces of them on devices that supported or were connected to the private email domain. Others we found by reviewing the archived government email accounts of people who had been government employees at the same time as Secretary Clinton, including high-ranking officials at other agencies, with whom a Secretary of State might naturally correspond. This helped us recover work-related emails that were not among the ~~34,000~~30,000 produced to State. Still others we recovered from the laborious review of the millions of email fragments dumped into the slack space of the server decommissioned in 2013~~xx~~.

All told, we found ~~xxxx~~ thousands of emails that were not among those produced to the State Department last year in late 2014. ~~Of those, we assessed that xxxx possibly contained classified information at the time they were sent or received and so we sent them to other government agencies for classification determinations.~~ To date, agencies have concluded that ~~xxxx~~ of those were classified at the time they were sent or received, ~~xxx~~ at the Secret level and ~~xxxx~~ at the Confidential level. There were no additional Top Secret emails found. Finally, ~~xxxx~~ none of those we found have since been “up classified.”

I should add here that we found no evidence that any of the additional work-related emails ~~we found~~ were intentionally deleted in an effort to conceal them. Our assessment is that, like many users of private email accounts, Secretary Clinton periodically deleted emails or emails were purged from the system when devices were changed. Because she was not using a government account, there was no archiving of her emails, so it is not surprising that we discovered emails that were not on Secretary Clinton’s system in 2015~~4~~, when she produced the ~~34,000~~30,000 emails to the State Department.

It could also be that some of the additional work-related emails we recovered were among those deleted as “personal” by Secretary Clinton’s lawyers when they reviewed and sorted her emails for production in 2014~~5~~. We have conducted interviews and done technical examination to attempt to understand how that sorting was done. Although we do not have complete visibility because we are not fully able to reconstruct the electronic record of that sorting, we believe our investigation has been sufficient to give us reasonable confidence there was no intentional misconduct in connection with that sorting effort.

The lawyers doing the sorting for Secretary Clinton in 2014~~5~~ did not individually read the content of all of her ~~tens of thousands of~~ emails, as we did for those available to us; instead, they used search terms to try to find all work-related emails among the reportedly more than 60,000 total emails remaining on Secretary Clinton's private system in 201~~5~~4. It is highly likely their search terms missed some work-related emails, and that we found them, for example, in the mailboxes of other officials or in the slack space of a server. It is also likely that there are other work-related emails that they did not produce to State and that we did not find elsewhere, and that are now gone because they deleted all emails they did not return to State, and the lawyers cleaned their devices in a such a way as to preclude forensic recovery.

And, of course, in addition~~a~~ to our technical work, we interviewed many people, from those involved in setting up and maintaining the various iterations of Secretary Clinton's private server to staff members with whom she corresponded on email, to those involved in the email production to State, and finally, Secretary Clinton herself.

Lastly, we have done extensive work with the assistance of our colleagues elsewhere in the Intelligence Community to understand what indications there might be of compromise by hostile actors in connection with the private email operation.

That's what we have done. Now let me tell you what we found.

Although we did not find clear evidence that Secretary Clinton or her colleagues intended to violate laws governing the handling of classified information, there is evidence that they were extremely careless in their handling of very sensitive, highly classified information. ~~There is evidence to support a conclusion that Secretary Clinton, and others, used the private email server in a manner that was grossly negligent with respect to the handling of classified information.~~ For example, seven email chains concern matters that were classified at the TS/SAP level when they were sent and received. These chains involved Secretary Clinton both sending emails about those matters and receiving emails from others about the same matters. There is evidence to support a conclusion that any reasonable person in Secretary Clinton's position, or in the position of those government employees with whom she was corresponding about these matters, should have known that an unclassified system was no place for such an email conversation. ~~Although we did not find clear evidence that Secretary Clinton or her colleagues intended to violate laws governing the handling of classified information, there is evidence that they were extremely careless in their handling of very sensitive, highly classified information.~~

~~Similarly, In addition to this highly sensitive information, we also found the sheer volume of information that was properly classified as Secret by the U.S. Intelligence Community at the time it was discussed on email (that is, excluding the "up classified" emails). This is especially concerning because all of these emails were housed on servers not supported by full-time security staff, like those found at Departments and Agencies of the U.S. Government. supports an inference that the participants were grossly negligent in their handling of that information.~~

~~While not the focus of our investigation, we~~ also developed evidence that the security culture of the State Department in general, and with respect to use of unclassified email systems in particular, was generally lacking in the kind of care for classified information found elsewhere in the government.

With respect to potential computer intrusion by hostile actors, we did not find direct evidence that Secretary Clinton's personal email system, in its various configurations since 2009, was successfully hacked. But, given the nature of the system and of the actors potentially involved, we assess that we would be unlikely to see such direct evidence. We do assess that hostile actors gained access to the private commercial email accounts of individuals with whom Secretary Clinton was in regular contact from her personal private account. We also assess that Secretary Clinton's use of a private-personal email domain was both known by a large number of people and readily apparent. Given that combination of factors, we assess it is reasonably likely possible that hostile actors gained access to Secretary Clinton's private-personal email account.

Commented [p5]:

So that's what we found.

Finally, with respect to our recommendation to the Department of Justice. In our system, the prosecutors make the decisions about whether charges are appropriate based on evidence the FBI has helped collect. Although we don't normally make public our recommendations to the prosecutors, we frequently make recommendations and engage in productive conversations with prosecutors about what resolution may be appropriate, given the evidence. In this case, given the importance of the matter, I think unusual transparency is in order.

In looking back at our investigations in similar circumstances, we cannot find a case that would support bringing criminal charges on these facts. All the cases prosecuted involved some combination of: (1) clearly intentional mishandling of classified information; (2) vast quantities of materials exposed in such a way as to support an inference of intentional misconduct; (3) indications of disloyalty to the United States; or (4) efforts to obstruct justice. All charged cases of which we are aware have involved the accusation that a government employee intentionally mishandled classified information. We see none of that here.

Commented [p6]: We changed none of this text, we simply reordered it. The original text is below , struck-out.

Although there is evidence of potential violations of the statutes regarding the handling of classified information, my judgment is that no reasonable prosecutor would bring such a case. Prosecutors necessarily weigh a number of factors before bringing charges. There are obvious considerations, like the strength of the evidence. But they must be balanced against things like the intent and context of the person's actions. To be clear, this is not to suggest that in similar circumstances, an individual who engaged in this activity would face NO consequences. To the contrary, such individuals are often subject to security or administrative sanctions. But that decision is not what is before me now.

~~Although there is evidence of potential violations of the statute proscribing gross negligence in the handling of classified information and of the statute proscribing misdemeanor mishandling, my judgment is that no reasonable prosecutor would bring such a case. At the outset, we are not aware of a case where anyone has been charged solely based on the "gross negligence" prohibition in the statute. In looking back at our investigations in similar circumstances, we cannot find a case that would support bringing criminal charges on these facts. All the cases prosecuted involved some combination of: (1) clearly intentional misconduct; (2) vast quantities of materials exposed in such a way as to support an inference of intentional misconduct; (3) indications of disloyalty to the United States; or (4) efforts to obstruct justice. We see none of that here.~~

Accordingly, although the Department of Justice makes final decisions on matters such as this, I am completing the investigation by expressing to Justice my view that no charges are appropriate in this case.

I know there will be intense public disagreement in the wake of this result, as there was throughout this investigation. What I can assure the American people is that this investigation was done competently, honestly, and independently. No outside influence of any kind was brought to bear. I know there were many opinions expressed by people who were not part of the investigation – including people in government – but none of that mattered to us. Opinions are irrelevant, and they were all uninformed by insight into our investigation, because we did the investigation in a professional way. Only facts matter, and the FBI found them here in an entirely apolitical and professional way. I couldn't be prouder to be part of this organization.

Good morning. I'm here to give you an update on the FBI's investigation of Secretary Clinton's use of a personal email system during her time as Secretary of State.

After a tremendous amount of work over the last year, the FBI has finished its investigation and referred the case to the Department of Justice for a prosecutive decision. What I would like to do today is tell you three things: what we did; what we found; and what we have recommended to the Department of Justice.

This will be an unusual statement in at least a couple ways. First, I am going to include more detail than I ordinarily would, because I think the American people deserve those details in a case of intense public interest. Second, I have not coordinated or reviewed this statement in any way with the Department of Justice or any other part of the government. They do not know what I am about to say.

But I want to start by thanking the many FBI employees who did remarkable work in this case. Once you have a better sense of how much we have done, you will understand why I am so grateful and proud of their efforts.

So, first, what we have done:

The investigation began as a referral from the Intelligence Community Inspector General in connection with Secretary Clinton's use of a personal email server during her time as Secretary of State. The referral focused on whether classified information was transmitted on that personal system.

Our investigation looked at whether there is evidence that classified information was improperly stored or transmitted on that personal system, in violation of a federal statute that makes it a felony to mishandle classified information either intentionally or in a grossly negligent way, or a second statute that makes it a misdemeanor to knowingly remove classified information from appropriate systems or storage facilities.

Consistent with our counter-intelligence responsibilities, we have also investigated to determine whether there is evidence of computer intrusion in connection with the personal email server by any foreign power, or other hostile actors.

I have so far used the singular term, “email server,” in describing the referral that began our investigation. It turns out to have been more complicated than that. Secretary Clinton used several different servers and administrators of those servers during her four years at the State Department, and used numerous mobile devices to view and send email on that personal domain. As new servers and equipment were employed, older servers were taken out of service, stored, and decommissioned in various ways. Piecing all of that back together -- to gain as full an understanding as possible of the ways in which personal email was used for government work -- has been a painstaking undertaking, requiring thousands of hours of effort.

For example, when one of Secretary Clinton’s original personal servers was decommissioned in 2013, the email software was removed. Doing that didn’t remove the email content, but it was like removing the frame from a huge finished jigsaw puzzle and dumping the pieces on the floor. The effect was that millions of email fragments end up unsorted in the server’s un-used – or “slack” – space. We searched through all of it to see what was there, and what parts of the puzzle could be put back together.

FBI investigators have also read all of the approximately 30,000 emails provided by Secretary Clinton to the State Department in December 2014. Where an email was assessed as possibly containing classified information, the FBI referred the email to any U.S. government agency that was a likely “owner” of information in the email, so that agency could make a determination as to whether the email contained classified information at the time it was sent or received, or whether there was reason to classify the email now, even if its content was not classified at the time it was sent (that is the process sometimes referred to as “up-classifying”).

From the group of 30,000 emails returned to the State Department [REDACTED] emails in [REDACTED] email chains have been determined by the owning agency to contain classified information at the time they were sent or received. Eight of those chains contained information that was Top Secret at the time they were sent; 36 chains contained Secret information at the time; an [REDACTED] contained Confidential information, which is the lowest level of classification. Separate from those, about 2,000 additional emails were “up-classified” to make them Confidential; the information in those had not been classified at the time the emails were sent.

The FBI also discovered several thousand work-related emails that were not in the group of 30,000 that were returned by Secretary Clinton to State in 2014.

We found those additional emails in a variety of ways. Some had been deleted over the years and we found traces of them on devices that supported or were connected to the private email domain. Others we found by reviewing the archived government email accounts of people who had been government employees at the same time as Secretary Clinton, including high-ranking officials at other agencies, people with whom a Secretary of State might naturally correspond. This helped us recover work-related emails that were not among the 30,000 produced to State. Still others we recovered from the laborious review of the millions of email fragments dumped into the slack space of the server decommissioned in 2013.

With respect to the thousands of emails we found that were not among those produced to State, agencies have concluded that xx of those were classified at the time they were sent or received, x at the Secret level and xx at the Confidential level. There were no additional Top Secret emails found. Finally, xx of those we found have since been “up-classified.”

I should add here that we found no evidence that any of the additional work-related emails were intentionally deleted in an effort to conceal them. Our assessment is that, like many email users, Secretary Clinton periodically deleted emails or emails were purged from the system when devices were changed. Because she was not using a government account – or even a commercial account like Gmail – there was no archiving at all of her emails, so it is not surprising that we discovered emails that were not on Secretary Clinton’s system in 2014, when she produced the 30,000 emails to the State Department.

It could also be that some of the additional work-related emails we recovered were among those deleted as “personal” by Secretary Clinton’s lawyers when they reviewed and sorted her emails for production in 2014.

The lawyers doing the sorting for Secretary Clinton in 2014 did not individually read the content of all of her emails, as we did for those available to us; instead, they relied on header information and used search terms to try to find all work-related emails among the reportedly more than 60,000 total emails remaining on Secretary Clinton’s personal system in 2014. It is highly likely their search terms missed some work-related emails, and that we later found them, for example, in the mailboxes of other officials or in the slack space of a server. It is also likely that there are other work-related emails that they did not produce to State and that we did not find elsewhere, and that are now gone because they deleted all emails they did not return to State, and the lawyers cleaned their devices in such a way as to preclude complete forensic recovery.

We have conducted interviews and done technical examination to attempt to understand how that sorting was done by her attorneys. Although we do not have complete visibility because we are not fully able to reconstruct the electronic record of that sorting, we believe our investigation has been sufficient to give us reasonable confidence there was no intentional misconduct in connection with that sorting effort.

And, of course, in addition to our technical work, we interviewed many people, from those involved in setting up and maintaining the various iterations of Secretary Clinton's personal server, to staff members with whom she corresponded on email, to those involved in the email production to State, and finally, Secretary Clinton herself.

Last, we have done extensive work to understand what indications there might be of compromise by hostile actors in connection with the personal email operation.

That's what we have done. Now let me tell you what we found:

Although we did not find clear evidence that Secretary Clinton or her colleagues intended to violate laws governing the handling of classified information, there is evidence that they were extremely careless in their handling of very sensitive, highly classified information.

For example, seven email chains concern matters that were classified at the Top Secret/Special Access Program level when they were sent and received. These chains involved Secretary Clinton both sending emails about those matters and receiving emails from others about the same matters. There is evidence to support a conclusion that any reasonable person in Secretary Clinton's position, or in the position of those government employees with whom she was corresponding about these matters, should have known that an unclassified system was no place for that conversation. In addition to this highly sensitive information, we also found information that was properly classified as Secret by the U.S. Intelligence Community at the time it was discussed on email (that is, excluding the later "up-classified" emails).

None of these emails should have been on any kind of unclassified system, but their presence is especially concerning because all of these emails were housed on unclassified personal servers not even supported by full-time security staff, like those found at Departments and Agencies of the U.S. Government – or even with a commercial service like Gmail.

Separately, it is important to say something about the marking of classified information. Only a very small number of the emails containing classified information bore markings indicating the presence of classified information. But even if information is not marked “classified” in an email, participants who know or should know that the subject matter is classified are still obligated to protect it.

While not the focus of our investigation, we also developed evidence that the security culture of the State Department in general, and with respect to use of unclassified email systems in particular, was generally lacking in the kind of care for classified information found elsewhere in the government.

With respect to potential computer intrusion by hostile actors, we did not find direct evidence that Secretary Clinton’s personal email system, in its various configurations since 2009, was successfully hacked. But, given the nature of the system and of the actors potentially involved, we assess that we would be unlikely to see such direct evidence. We do assess that hostile actors gained access to the private commercial email accounts of people with whom Secretary Clinton was in regular contact from her personal account. We also assess that Secretary Clinton’s use of a personal email domain was both known by a large number of people and readily apparent. She also used her personal email extensively while outside the United States, including from the territory of sophisticated adversaries. That use included an email exchange with the President while Secretary Clinton was on the territory of such an adversary. Given that combination of factors, we assess it is possible that hostile actors gained access to Secretary Clinton’s personal email account.

So that’s what we found. Finally, with respect to our recommendation to the Department of Justice:

In our system, the prosecutors make the decisions about whether charges are appropriate based on evidence the FBI has helped collect. Although we don’t normally make public our recommendations to the prosecutors, we frequently make recommendations and engage in productive conversations with prosecutors about what resolution may be appropriate, given the evidence. In this case, given the importance of the matter, I think unusual transparency is in order.

Although there is evidence of potential violations of the statutes regarding the handling of classified information, our judgment is that no reasonable prosecutor would bring such a case. Prosecutors necessarily weigh a number of factors before bringing charges. There are obvious considerations, like the strength of the evidence, especially about intent. Responsible decisions also consider the context of a person's actions, and how similar situations have been handled in the past.

In looking back at our investigations into mishandling or removal of classified information, we cannot find a case that would support bringing criminal charges on these facts. All the cases prosecuted involved some combination of: clearly intentional and willful mishandling of classified information; or vast quantities of materials exposed in such a way as to support an inference of intentional misconduct; or indications of disloyalty to the United States; or efforts to obstruct justice. We do not see those things here.

To be clear, this is not to suggest that in similar circumstances, a person who engaged in this activity would face no consequences. To the contrary, those individuals are often subject to security or administrative sanctions. But that is not what we are deciding now.

As a result, although the Department of Justice makes final decisions on matters like this, we are completing the investigation by expressing to Justice our view that no charges are appropriate in this case.

I know there will be intense public debate in the wake of this recommendation, as there was throughout this investigation. What I can assure the American people is that this investigation was done competently, honestly, and independently. No outside influence of any kind was brought to bear.

I know there were many opinions expressed by people who were not part of the investigation – including people in government – but none of that mattered to us. Opinions are irrelevant, and they were all uninformed by insight into our investigation, because we did the investigation the right way. Only facts matter, and the FBI found them here in an entirely apolitical and professional way. I couldn't be prouder to be part of this organization.

This will be an unusual statement in at least a couple ways. First, I am going to include more detail than I ordinarily would, because I think the American people deserve those details in a case of intense public interest. Second, I have not coordinated or reviewed this statement in any way with the Department of Justice or any other part of the government. They do not know what I am about to say.

I want to start by thanking the many FBI employees who did remarkable work in this case. Once you have a better sense of how much we have done, you will understand why I am so grateful and proud of their efforts.

So, first, what we have done:

The investigation began as a referral from the Intelligence Community Inspector General in connection with Secretary Clinton's use of a personal email server during her time as Secretary of State. The referral focused on whether classified information was transmitted on that personal system.

Our investigation looked at whether there is evidence that classified information was improperly stored or transmitted on that personal system, in violation of a federal statute that makes it a felony to mishandle classified information either intentionally or in a grossly negligent way, or a second statute that makes it a misdemeanor to knowingly remove classified information from appropriate systems or storage facilities.

Consistent with our counter-intelligence responsibilities, we have also investigated to determine whether there is evidence of computer intrusion in connection with the personal email server by any foreign power, or other hostile actors.

I have so far used the singular term, “email server,” in describing the referral that began our investigation. It turns out to have been more complicated than that. Secretary Clinton used several different servers and administrators of those servers during her four years at the State Department, and used numerous mobile devices to view and send email on that personal domain. As new servers and equipment were employed, older servers were taken out of service, stored, and decommissioned in various ways. Piecing all of that back together -- to gain as full an understanding as possible of the ways in which personal email was used for government work -- has been a painstaking undertaking, requiring thousands of hours of effort.

For example, when one of Secretary Clinton’s original personal servers was decommissioned in 2013, the email software was removed. Doing that didn’t remove the email content, but it was like removing the frame from a huge finished jigsaw puzzle and dumping the pieces on the floor. The effect was that millions of email fragments end up unsorted in the server’s un-used – or “slack” – space. We searched through all of it to see what was there, and what parts of the puzzle could be put back together.

FBI investigators have also read all of the approximately 30,000 emails provided by Secretary Clinton to the State Department in December 2014. Where an email was assessed as possibly containing classified information, the FBI referred the email to any U.S. government agency that was a likely “owner” of information in the email, so that agency could make a determination as to whether the email contained classified information at the time it was sent or received, or whether there was reason to classify the email now, even if its content was not classified at the time it was sent (that is the process sometimes referred to as “up-classifying”).

From the group of 30,000 emails returned to the State Department [REDACTED] emails in [REDACTED] email chains have been determined by the owning agency to contain classified information at the time they were sent or received. Eight of those chains contained information that was Top Secret at the time they were sent; 36 chains contained Secret information at the time; an [REDACTED] contained Confidential information, which is the lowest level of classification. Separate from those, about 2,000 additional emails were “up-classified” to make them Confidential; the information in those had not been classified at the time the emails were sent.

The FBI also discovered several thousand work-related emails that were not in the group of 30,000 that were returned by Secretary Clinton to State in 2014. We found those additional emails in a variety of ways. Some had been deleted over the years and we found traces of them on devices that supported or were connected to the private email domain. Others we found by reviewing the archived government email accounts of people who had been government employees at the same time as Secretary Clinton, including high-ranking officials at other agencies, people with whom a Secretary of State might naturally correspond. This helped us recover work-related emails that were not among the 30,000 produced to State. Still others we recovered from the laborious review of the millions of email fragments dumped into the slack space of the server decommissioned in 2013.

With respect to the thousands of emails we found that were not among those produced to State, agencies have concluded that xx of those were classified at the time they were sent or received, x at the Secret level and xx at the Confidential level. There were no additional Top Secret emails found. Finally, xx of those we found have since been “up-classified.”

I should add here that we found no evidence that any of the additional work-related emails were intentionally deleted in an effort to conceal them. Our assessment is that, like many email users, Secretary Clinton periodically deleted emails or emails were purged from the system when devices were changed. Because she was not using a government account – or even a commercial account like Gmail – there was no archiving at all of her emails, so it is not surprising that we discovered emails that were not on Secretary Clinton’s system in 2014, when she produced the 30,000 emails to the State Department.

It could also be that some of the additional work-related emails we recovered were among those deleted as “personal” by Secretary Clinton’s lawyers when they reviewed and sorted her emails for production in 2014.

The lawyers doing the sorting for Secretary Clinton in 2014 did not individually read the content of all of her emails, as we did for those available to us; instead, they relied on header information and used search terms to try to find all work-related emails among the reportedly more than 60,000 total emails remaining on Secretary Clinton’s personal system in 2014. It is highly likely their search terms missed some work-related emails, and that we later found them, for example, in the mailboxes of other officials or in the slack space of a server. It is also likely that there are other work-related emails that they did not produce to State and that we did not find elsewhere, and that are now gone because they deleted all emails they did not return to State, and the lawyers cleaned their devices in such a way as to preclude complete forensic recovery.

We have conducted interviews and done technical examination to attempt to understand how that sorting was done by her attorneys. Although we do not have complete visibility because we are not able to fully reconstruct the electronic record of that sorting, we believe our investigation has been sufficient to give us reasonable confidence there was no intentional misconduct in connection with that sorting effort.

And, of course, in addition to our technical work, we interviewed many people, from those involved in setting up and maintaining the various iterations of Secretary Clinton's personal server, to staff members with whom she corresponded on email, to those involved in the email production to State, and finally, Secretary Clinton herself.

Last, we have done extensive work to understand what indications there might be of compromise by hostile actors in connection with the personal email operation.

That's what we have done. Now let me tell you what we found:

Although we did not find clear evidence that Secretary Clinton or her colleagues intended to violate laws governing the handling of classified information, there is evidence that they were extremely careless in their handling of very sensitive, highly classified information.

For example, seven email chains concern matters that were classified at the Top Secret/Special Access Program level when they were sent and received. These chains involved Secretary Clinton both sending emails about those matters and receiving emails from others about the same matters. There is evidence to support a conclusion that any reasonable person in Secretary Clinton's position, or in the position of those government employees with whom she was corresponding about these matters, should have known that an unclassified system was no place for that conversation. In addition to this highly sensitive information, we also found information that was properly classified as Secret by the U.S. Intelligence Community at the time it was discussed on email (that is, excluding the later "up-classified" emails).

None of these emails should have been on any kind of unclassified system, but their presence is especially concerning because all of these emails were housed on unclassified personal servers not even supported by full-time security staff, like those found at Departments and Agencies of the U.S. Government – or even with a commercial service like Gmail.

Separately, it is important to say something about the marking of classified information. Only a very small number of the emails containing classified information bore markings indicating the presence of classified information. But even if information is not marked “classified” in an email, participants who know or should know that the subject matter is classified are still obligated to protect it.

While not the focus of our investigation, we also developed evidence that the security culture of the State Department in general, and with respect to use of unclassified email systems in particular, was generally lacking in the kind of care for classified information found elsewhere in the government.

With respect to potential computer intrusion by hostile actors, we did not find direct evidence that Secretary Clinton’s personal email domain, in its various configurations since 2009, was successfully hacked. But, given the nature of the system and of the actors potentially involved, we assess that we would be unlikely to see such direct evidence. We do assess that hostile actors gained access to the private commercial email accounts of people with whom Secretary Clinton was in regular contact from her personal account. We also assess that Secretary Clinton’s use of a personal email domain was both known by a large number of people and readily apparent. She also used her personal email extensively while outside the United States, including from the territory of sophisticated adversaries. That use included an email exchange with another senior government official while Secretary Clinton was in the territory of such an adversary. Given that combination of factors, we assess it is possible that hostile actors gained access to Secretary Clinton’s personal email account.

So that’s what we found. Finally, with respect to our recommendation to the Department of Justice:

In our system, the prosecutors make the decisions about whether charges are appropriate based on evidence the FBI has helped collect. Although we don’t normally make public our recommendations to the prosecutors, we frequently make recommendations and engage in productive conversations with prosecutors about what resolution may be appropriate, given the evidence. In this case, given the importance of the matter, I think unusual transparency is in order.

Although there is evidence of potential violations of the statutes regarding the handling of classified information, our judgment is that no reasonable prosecutor would bring such a case. Prosecutors necessarily weigh a number of factors before bringing charges. There are obvious considerations, like the strength of the evidence, especially about intent. Responsible decisions also consider the context of a person's actions, and how similar situations have been handled in the past.

In looking back at our investigations into mishandling or removal of classified information, we cannot find a case that would support bringing criminal charges on these facts. All the cases prosecuted involved some combination of: clearly intentional and willful mishandling of classified information; or vast quantities of materials exposed in such a way as to support an inference of intentional misconduct; or indications of disloyalty to the United States; or efforts to obstruct justice. We do not see those things here.

To be clear, this is not to suggest that in similar circumstances, a person who engaged in this activity would face no consequences. To the contrary, those individuals are often subject to security or administrative sanctions. But that is not what we are deciding now.

As a result, although the Department of Justice makes final decisions on matters like this, we are completing the investigation by expressing to Justice our view that no charges are appropriate in this case.

I know there will be intense public debate in the wake of this recommendation, as there was throughout this investigation. What I can assure the American people is that this investigation was done competently, honestly, and independently. No outside influence of any kind was brought to bear.

I know there were many opinions expressed by people who were not part of the investigation – including people in government – but none of that mattered to us. Opinions are irrelevant, and they were all uninformed by insight into our investigation, because we did the investigation the right way. Only facts matter, and the FBI found them here in an entirely apolitical and professional way. I couldn't be prouder to be part of this organization.

TRANSITORY RECORD

I've been trying to imagine what it would look like if I decided to do an FBI only press event to close out our work and hand the matter to DOJ. To help shape our discussions of whether that, or something different, makes sense, I have spent some time crafting what I would say, which follows. In my imagination, I don't see me taking any questions. Here is what it might look like:

Good afternoon folks. I am here to give you an update on our investigation of Secretary Clinton's use of a private email system, which began in late August.

After a tremendous amount of work, the FBI has completed its investigation and has referred the case to the Department of Justice for a prosecutive decision. What I would like to do today is tell you three things: (1) what we did; (2) what we found; (3) what we have recommended to DOJ.

But I want to start by thanking the many agents, analysts, technologists, and other FBI employees who did work of extraordinary quality in this case. Once you have a better sense of how much we have done, you will understand why I am so grateful and proud of their efforts.

So, first: what we have done over the last eight months.

The investigation began as a referral from the Intelligence Community Inspector General in connection with Secretary Clinton's use of a private email server during his time as Secretary of State, focused on whether classified information was transmitted on that private system.

Our investigation focused on whether there is evidence that classified information was improperly stored or transmitted on that private system, in violation of a federal statute that makes it a felony to mishandle classified information either intentionally or in a grossly negligent way, or a second statute that makes it a misdemeanor to remove classified information from appropriate systems or storage facilities.

Consistent with our counterintelligence responsibilities, we have also investigated to determine whether there is evidence of computer intrusion in connection with the private email server by any foreign power, or hackers on behalf of a foreign power.

I have so far used the singular term "email server" in describing the referral that began our

I have so far used the singular term, "email server," in describing the referral that began our investigation. It turns out to have been more complicated than that. Secretary Clinton used several different servers and providers of those servers during her four years at the State Department, and used numerous mobile devices to view and send email on that private domain. As new servers and providers were employed, older servers were taken out of service, stored, and decommissioned in various ways. Piecing all of that back together to gain as full an understanding as possible of the ways in which private email was used for government work has been a painstaking undertaking, requiring thousands of hours of effort.

For example, when one of Secretary Clinton's original private servers was decommissioned in 20xx, the email software was removed. Doing that didn't remove the email content, but it was like removing the frame from a huge finished jigsaw puzzle and dumping the pieces on the floor. The effect was that millions of email fragments end up unsorted in the server's un-used – or "slack" – space. We went through all of it to see what was there, and what parts of the puzzle could be put back together.

FBI investigators have also read all 34,000 emails provided by Secretary Clinton to the State Department in spring 2015. Where an email was assessed as possibly containing classified information, the FBI referred the email to the U.S. government agency that was the likely "owner" of the information in the email so that agency could make a determination as to whether the email contained classified information at the time it was sent or received, or whether there was reason to classify the email now, even if its content was not classified at the time it was sent (this is the process sometimes referred to as "up classifying").

From that group of 34,000 emails that had been returned to the State Department in 2015, the FBI sent xxxx emails to agencies for classification determinations. Of those, xxxx have been determined to contain classified information at the time they were sent or received. Xxxx of those contained information that was Top Secret at the time they were sent; xxxx contained Secret information at the time; and xxxx contained Confidential information. Separate from those, a total of xxxx additional emails were "up classified" to make them Secret or Confidential; the information in those had not been classified at the time the emails were sent.

The FBI also discovered xxxx work-related emails that were not in the group of 34,000 that were returned by Secretary Clinton to State in 2015. We found those additional emails in a variety of ways. Some had been deleted over the years and we found traces of them on devices that supported or were connected to the private email domain. Others we found by reviewing the archived government email accounts of people who had been government employees at the same time as Secretary Clinton, including high-ranking officials at other agencies, with whom a Secretary of State might naturally correspond. This helped us recover work-related emails that were not among the 34,000 produced to State. Still others we recovered from the laborious review of the millions of email fragments dumped into the slack space of the server decommissioned in 20xx.

All told, we found xxxx emails that were not among those produced to the State Department last year. Of those, we assessed that xxxx possibly contained classified information at the time they were sent or received and so we sent them to other government agencies for classification determinations. To date, agencies have concluded that xxxx of those were classified at the time they were sent or received, xxx at the Secret level and xxxx at the Confidential level. There were no additional Top Secret emails found. Finally, none of those we found have since been "up classified."

I should add here that we found no evidence that any of the additional work-related emails we found were intentionally deleted in an effort to conceal them. Our assessment is that, like many users of private email accounts, Secretary Clinton periodically deleted emails or emails were purged from the system when devices were changed. Because she was not using a government account, there was no archiving of her emails, so it is not surprising that we discovered emails that were not on Secretary Clinton's system in 2015, when she produced the 34,000 emails to the State Department.

It could also be that some of the additional work-related emails we recovered were among those deleted as "personal" by Secretary Clinton's lawyers when they reviewed and sorted her emails for production in 2015. We have conducted interviews and done technical examination to attempt to understand how that sorting was done. Although we do not have complete visibility because we are not fully able to reconstruct the electronic record of that sorting, we believe our investigation has been sufficient to give us reasonable confidence there was no intentional misconduct in connection with that sorting effort.

The lawyers doing the sorting for Secretary Clinton in 2015 did not individually read tens of thousands of emails, as we did; instead, they used search terms to try to find all work-related emails among the more than 60,000 total emails remaining on Secretary Clinton's private system in 2015. It is highly likely their search terms missed some work-related emails, and that we found them, for example, in the mailboxes of other officials or in the slack space of a server. It is also likely that there are other work-related emails that they did not produce to State and that we did not find elsewhere, and that are now gone because they deleted all emails they did not return to State, and the lawyers cleaned their devices in a such a way as to preclude forensic recovery.

And, of course, in addition to our technical work, we interviewed many people, from those involved in setting up and maintaining the various iterations of Secretary Clinton's private server to staff members with whom she corresponded on email, to those involved in the email production to State, and finally, Secretary Clinton herself.

Lastly, we have done extensive work with the assistance of our colleagues elsewhere in the Intelligence Community to understand what indications there might be of compromise by hostile actors in connection with the private email operation.

That's what we have done. Now let me tell you what we found.

There is evidence to support a conclusion that Secretary Clinton, and others, used the private email server in a manner that was grossly negligent with respect to the handling of classified information. For example, seven email chains concern matters that were classified at the TS/SAP level when they were sent and received. These chains involved Secretary Clinton both sending emails about those matters and receiving emails from others about the same matters. There is evidence to support a conclusion that any reasonable person in Secretary Clinton's position, or in the position of those government employees with whom she was corresponding about these matters, should have known that an unclassified system was no place for such an email conversation. Although we did not find clear evidence that Secretary Clinton or her colleagues intended to violate laws governing the handling of classified information, there is evidence that they were extremely careless in their handling of very sensitive, highly classified information.

Similarly, the sheer volume of information that was properly classified as Secret at the time it was discussed on email (that is, excluding the "up classified" emails) supports an inference that the participants were grossly negligent in their handling of that information.

We also developed evidence that the security culture of the State Department in general, and with respect to use of unclassified email systems in particular, was generally lacking in the kind of care for classified information found elsewhere in the government.

With respect to potential computer intrusion by hostile actors, we did not find direct evidence that Secretary Clinton's personal email system, in its various configurations since 2009, was successfully hacked. But, given the nature of the system and of the actors potentially involved, we assess that we would be unlikely to see such direct evidence. We do assess that hostile actors gained access to the private email accounts of individuals with whom Secretary Clinton was in regular contact from her private account. We also assess that Secretary Clinton's use of a private email domain was both known by a large number of people and readily apparent. Given that combination of factors, we assess it is reasonably likely that hostile actors gained access to Secretary Clinton's private email account.

So that's what we found.

Finally, with respect to our recommendation to the Department of Justice. In our system, the prosecutors make the decisions about whether charges are appropriate based on evidence the FBI has helped collect. Although we don't normally make public our recommendations to the prosecutors, we frequently make recommendations and engage in productive conversations with prosecutors about what resolution may be appropriate, given the evidence. In this case, given the importance of the matter, I think unusual transparency is in order.

Although there is evidence of potential violations of the statute proscribing gross negligence in the handling of classified information and of the statute proscribing misdemeanor mishandling, my judgment is that no reasonable prosecutor would bring such a case. At the outset, we are not aware of a case where anyone has been charged solely based on the "gross negligence" prohibition in the statute. All charged cases of which we are aware have involved the accusation that a government employee intentionally mishandled classified information. In looking back at our investigations in similar circumstances, we cannot find a case that would support bringing criminal charges on these facts. All the cases prosecuted involved some combination of: (1) clearly intentional misconduct; (2) vast quantities of materials exposed in such a way as to support an inference of intentional misconduct; (3) indications of disloyalty to the United States; or (4) efforts to obstruct justice. We see none of that here.

Accordingly, although the Department of Justice makes final decisions on matters such as this, I am completing the investigation by expressing to Justice my view that no charges are appropriate in this case.

I know there will be intense public disagreement in the wake of this result, as there was throughout this investigation. What I can assure the American people is that this investigation was done competently, honestly, and independently. No outside influence of any kind was brought to bear. I know there were many opinions expressed by people who were not part of the investigation -- including people in government -- but none of that mattered to us. Opinions are irrelevant, and they were all uninformed by insight into our investigation, because we did the investigation in a professional way. Only facts matter, and the FBI found them here in an entirely apolitical and professional way. I couldn't be prouder to be part of this organization.

Trump's former and current advisers and the Russian leadership should, by itself, prompt an investigation. He referred indirectly in his letter to a speech given in Russia by one Trump adviser, Carter Page, a consultant and investor in the energy giant Gazprom, who criticized American sanctions policy toward Russia.\n\nTrump and his people keep saying the election is rigged.\n\nMr. Reid said. Why is he saying that? Because people are telling him the election can be messed with. Mr. Trump's advisers say they are concerned that unnamed elites could rig the election for his opponent, Hillary Clinton. | mmis | [REDACTED] |

It'll probably have to write talking points (likely for CyD) so I won't be able to make it.

You don't have to write talking points for Cyber if they don't tell you about the tasking!

I like having her on the team, but I was discouraged that she was so busy she was going to have [REDACTED] or somebody else start covering for her sometimes.Despite my personal interaction with him, I'm just not sure about his temperament in this project.                                     |
| 2015-08-2411:17:53, Mon | OUTBOX          | No you're right. He's a petulant baby (remind me to tell you his latest fit with her). She's being told that this new case (that's all she would say to me), [REDACTED] followed by dead people. So I'd be surprised if she hands off too much to him. More that she's going to have to let him handle more of [REDACTED] which she doesn't really want to do. |

| 2015-09-2608:31:14, Sat | OUTBOX          | What a joke: \nStill, there was progress. Never before had China agreed with Mr. Obama\u2019s fundamental premise that the theft of intellectual property for commercial gain was off limits. After weeks of behind-the-scenes negotiations with the Chinese leadership, first in Beijing in late August and then with a delegation of nearly 50 senior Chinese officials who came to Washington quietly two weeks ago, Beijing agreed to wording that read: \u201cNeither country\u2019s government will conduct or knowingly support cyber-enabled theft of intellectual property, including trade secrets or other confidential business information, with the intent of providing competitive advantages to companies or commercial sectors.\u201d\n\nLimiting Security Breaches May Be Impossible Task for U.S. and Chinahttp://nyti.ms/1LchlQD |

| 2015-09-2812:17:32, Mon | INBOX           | Hey heading into hq. Hit me on imsg later, I'll try to get a pass and figure out where to meet.                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| 2015-09-2812:25:26, Mon | OUTBOX          | Will do. I called and left yet another message for Jim baker. I think I'm just going to have to tell [REDACTED] tomorrow - I think we are planning on walking, no doubt she is going to ask when I returning and what in going to be doing. I am quite frustrated. \U0001f612     |

| 2015-10-1819:08:16, Sun | INBOX           | Easy when your ENTIRE country is the size of Oregon. And when your colonial policies are largely to blame for the Israeli-Palesinian conflict, the India -Pakistani conflict, pretty much every place your colonial empire touched.\n\nAnd finally the why can't the US have an MI5, they're soooo much better than us debate has died. Pretty much every bss or sb guy I've ever talked to wished they could be us. \n\nI have a real problem with Anglophiles and the whole perception of bringing intellectual greatness to the world.\n\nAnyway. She stayed yesterday for a Cyber guy that showed up 45 minutes late (and that we cancelled on due to end of day meetings). Hope that didn't keep her from leaving as early as she wanted to. And CyD is WILDLY dysfunctional. I mean really bad. They can do individual investigations but there is NO coherent program management. And this whole Strat/Tac model has just served to further balkanize their efforts. I mean it's REALLY bad. |

A) she's in your chain of command (and I know attys are much more flat than agents about that) B) realistically not anything you're going to be able to do about it C) you're out of office without access to high side D) not hurting you (other than your ego). You're plenty talented. Everyone knows that. And you want to own your issue. Thats good and normal and everyone knows that, too.\n\nI know you know all this. Just trying to help you not let this be aggravating... \U0001f60a |

And yes, I'm TOTALLY the same. I may unnecessarily care what people think way more than you. I'm trying to get a comfort with sense of self where I don't care. It's not so much on the professional work side (I know I'm good enough that I can be confident and humble there) but on the interpersonal side. |

| 2016-01-0901:02:50, Sat | OUTBOX | [REDACTED][REDACTED] D) I'm not kidding, I feel like punching [REDACTED] in the face. You're now being too nice. You can inform him ahead of time or after the fact of your investigative steps, but you're not asking permission to speak to someone at DOJ for fuck's sake. God I hate them. |
| 2016-01-0901:17:47, Sat | INBOX  | D) finally talked to him. I will dial back my judgment, he found stuff which makes it less likely we need to talk to her. Will explain next week.                                                                                                                                                  |

| 2016-01-0915:49:58, Sat | INBOX  | And I had a sudden sad and true realization. You're going to leave the Bu after Andy leaves. As hard as it was to go back to ogc last time, how do you ever go do something outside of (and below) that level?\n\nAnd that makes me deeply sad. \U0001f61f |
| 2016-01-0915:54:48, Sat | OUTBOX | I know [REDACTED] That's what I've been trying to tell you. Let's pretend for a moment that they didn't all hate me. Even without that, it would be hard to go back. But with it, it's pretty impossible. I won't be gone forever, you never know.             |
| 2016-01-0915:55:43, Sat | INBOX  | Damn right if I make it to DD I'll bring you back as GC.                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| 2016-01-1222:33:58, Tue | INBOX  | THAT SUCKS!!!!\n\nKeep your head up though, it will work itself out in a few months. Plus remember, job is going to be AWESOME.                                                                                                                                |

| 2016-01-2421:38:51, Sun | INBOX  | My sense is stay in ogc. It's what Trisha wants - does JB has a preference? - and I'm guessing but not certain it will be easier from a HR Source admin perspective as well. | 2016-01-2421:53:27, Sun | OUTBOX | No, you misunderstand. I got this email, muckities from other agencies were on it, as were Trisha and Jim, but couldn't decide whether to forward it and went back and forth bc I didn't want to step on toes or overstep if Jim had already forwarded, but Jim also isn't great at checking email over the weekend so I ended up text andy rather than just forwarding the email to him to ask whether he had received it or not. If I'm not in ogc, I don't think I'll have the same what's my role, am I overstepping stress. I just really want to be called his special counsel and not just special assistant, and I'm not sure Jim will let me. |
| 2016-01-2421:57:26, Sun | INBOX  | B) fortunately there will still be snow tomorrow. \nA) special counsel implies an ogc position, though, right? | 2016-01-2422:01:53, Sun | OUTBOX | I'm not sure I agree. If trisha's whole point of putting here is to ensure more reliance on ogc, I'm not sure she's embrace me acting pretty independently, which is the only way I know how to be. Will forward a couple of emails - not a perfect example but maybe a little demonstrative. There are other "special counsels", the D's, one in OCA. I'm sure they're grandfathered, but I don't think Jim or especially trisha will want me to suggest I'm a lawyer if I'm not in ogc.                                                                                                                                                              |
| 2016-01-2422:05:23, Sun | OUTBOX | Pretty important to me, actually. Especially if I plan to leave the bureau, I want my title to reflect the work I'm doing. Wtf is a special assistant to the private sector? Chief of staff would be fine, but 1) that's not the job I'll be doing and 2) Rybicki has made pretty clear he's opposed to me using that title. I'm a lawyer, it's my identity, it's what I'd like to call myself.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| 2016-01-2422:12:54, Sun | INBOX  | Completely understand. So stay in OGC and be special counsel. Why does JB not want that? Particularly if that means they have some connection to your job? JB will be much easier than Trisha.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |

Andy will eventually become so exasperated about having to wait 5 minutes for you to walk down while all the worthless lumpies are RIGHT THERE that he'll blow his top and have someone do it.                                                                                     |

| 2016-01-3013:18:28, Sat | OUTBOX | [REDACTED] \n\n Nothing big. Just talking about getting [REDACTED] his 15, being an agent came up, andy said to me I thought you were supposed to take care of this! I exclaimed that I tried, [REDACTED] said yeah, she and pete, and I told him how you and I would take turns harassing [REDACTED] He chuckled. |
| 2016-01-3104:06:13, Sun | OUTBOX | I know it is. I'll definitely be in at some point, have to consolidate comments for another [REDACTED] paper. Probably around 2:00? I will let you know as soon as I have a sense of it.                                                                                                                           |
| 2016-01-3118:12:48, Sun | OUTBOX | No, I can't bc the IOB I'm adjudication relates to a TS docket. And I need the application in front of me to explain what the order allowed, why it's an job.                                                                                                                                                      |
| 2016-02-0300:34:54, Wed | INBOX  | Also, FYI, I just hit up [REDACTED] and [REDACTED] about the matter we talked about briefly just now. They owe me detail about what we're going to tell the D, & I wanted to remind them it was still outstanding for our brief on Thursday.                                                                       |
| 2016-02-0300:36:11, Wed | INBOX  | Just wanted you to be aware of it in case you brought it up with her and conversation, that it didn't seem too coincidental. In fact, I guess it's fine, because it really is coincidental. Great minds thinking alike.\U0001f636                                                                                  |
| 2016-02-0300:36:55, Wed | OUTBOX | It is, but I won't bring it up.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |

| 2016-02-0301:29:11, Wed | INBOX  | The problem with that is if whoever gets the tasking has questions, you want them to go to you. And if Trisha does that (cuts you out), it creates additional work for her to be the intermediary, right?\n\nAnd, F [REDACTED]                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |

| 2016-02-0301:51:49, Wed | INBOX  | I of course forgot it. Will need to ask when I'm not obviously on my phone. She didn't remember his last name...\n\nAnyway... [REDACTED] is an asshole. Always will be. There is literally nothing you can do to change him or his opinion. And people realize he's a d*ck - so it truly becomes an issue of judging someone by their enemies. While it may drive you CRAZY, may be best simply to rise above this (never forget it) and take the higher road.                                     |
| 2016-02-0301:51:57, Wed | INBOX  | Agreed. | 2016-02-0302:02:21, Wed | INBOX  | Lisa, that's all true. And if you want to rub his nose in it and destroy him, you can. This is not the moment. But honest to God I think that's the wrong choice. \n\nWhy do you think he's such a little prick? Exactly BECAUSE he will never be asked to manage anything important at the FBI. Feel sorry for him, not angry at him. He is displaying HIS weakness, his flaws, his shortcomings. Nothing else. Float past it unperturbed like the all star you are. Success is the best revenge. |
| 2016-02-0302:06:48, Wed | INBOX  | And [REDACTED] the higher you are, the more visible. The greater the number of fans. And the greater number of dB haters. This is a good baptism by fire. Because he's such an ass, hopefully it's easier to move past. If the thought of him gets you down, then think of the response you got from [REDACTED] and Randy and John and Andy. He will never get that. Ever.                                                                                                                         |

[REDACTED] Also two stories, remind me: 1) Andy's Porsche is parked in the garage (he doesn't want to drive it home until the roads are less nasty) so let's go find it. 2) Figured out why [REDACTED] s different - he's both very mature and wildly immature at the same time. Have the perfect story to demonstrate this, re Steinbach. |

| 2016-02-1201:33:52, Fri | INBOX  | Well, except Trisha works with Bill and JG. Though this all explains JG's "you and Jon should go, split them up, with [REDACTED] at all of them." Because he's got Jim and Trisha pushing her (as they did with [REDACTED] at State, in front of the Deputy and the D, without raising it before hand - I agreed to it, because I thought they were right, though I was a little cranky about being put into a spot where I would potentially have to argue otherwise in that group), and JG's experience is having a senior guy there. \n\nBecause it's a great spot for me to be in to be telling doj "fewer people " while I simultaneously argue for two more for us. \nU0001f621 |

| 2016-02-2500:06:26, Thu | OUTBOX | Yup. Though truthfully, I'm not sure I understand what the problem is.                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| 2016-02-2500:15:04, Thu | INBOX  | Sorry still on phone. Issue is if Laufman makes himself one of the two DoJ, do I send the two case agents or insert myself. Andy told Bill send the best two. And what "best" means isn't clear to me in this context.                                      |
| 2016-02-2500:15:28, Thu | OUTBOX | Best means best. It's not a trick.                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| 2016-02-2500:15:52, Thu | OUTBOX | If Laufman does that, then that's DOJ's loss. And I think warrants a call to his superiors.                                                                                                                                                                 |
| 2016-02-2501:00:20, Thu | INBOX  | Hi. Just leaving. Trisha still there (or at least her car is). Saw [REDACTED] leaving, too, though he didn't see me [REDACTED]                                                                                                                              |
| 2016-02-2501:02:07, Thu | INBOX  | We talked about it, but "best" was not in terms of agents (though that's what I wrote). It's about what the best outcome is. [REDACTED]                                                                                                                     |
| 2016-02-2502:20:31, Thu | OUTBOX | Do you or Bill fundamentally believe that 3 and 3 is the RIGHT thing for the case? If the answer is no, then you call [REDACTED] back and say we're good as is. You have never wavered from saying 2 and 2 is best. I don't get what the hesitation is now. |
| 2016-02-2502:52:46, Thu | OUTBOX | One more thing: she might be our next president. The last thing you need us going in there loaded for bear. You think she's going to remember or care that it was more DOJ than FBI?                                                                        |

| 2016-02-2602:00:51, Fri | INBOX  | Picking your battles, with a view from the very top of the agency. Because most big bureaucratic fights are never clear wins.     |
| 2016-02-2602:01:18, Fri | OUTBOX | Yeah, I'd tell him. Because truly, I've done very little else the last couple of days.                                            |
| 2016-02-2602:01:29, Fri | INBOX  | This isn't a huge loss. We'll get a good interview. And if it isn't, we'll adjust.                                                |
| 2016-02-2602:01:41, Fri | OUTBOX | And at the end of the day, it IS hard hill to die on to fight between 6 and 7.                                                    |
| 2016-02-2602:02:14, Fri | INBOX  | And for the rest of the time we deal with DoJ, we'll hear about "how we did it that time in 2016."                                |
| 2016-02-2602:02:36, Fri | INBOX  | Yes, hence Andy's 4 vs 7 argument                                                                                                 |
| 2016-02-2602:02:52, Fri | INBOX  | Anyway. We BOTH need to move on for our sanity.                                                                                   |

| 2016-02-2602:28:06, Fri | INBOX  | I think Andy would tell him (or [REDACTED] rather than not at all because he knew you were relaying to me, right?                 |
| 2016-02-2602:28:14, Fri | INBOX  | What's never happening again?                                                                                                     |
| 2016-02-2602:29:05, Fri | OUTBOX | I specifically asked if I should tell you and he said yes.                                                                        |
| 2016-02-2602:29:07, Fri | INBOX  | Andy WILL travel...maybe not a whole day then, but a good chunk... [REDACTED]                                                     |
| 2016-02-2602:29:18, Fri | OUTBOX | [REDACTED]                                                                                                                        |
| 2016-02-2602:30:52, Fri | OUTBOX | So, re my cards, should I write Counsel to the DD or Special Counsel?                                                             |
| 2016-02-2602:36:46, Fri | INBOX  | Sorry, was on phone with [REDACTED]. He is immensely relieved he doesn't have to choose between himself or [REDACTED]. \U0001f612 |
| 2016-02-2602:37:10, Fri | INBOX  | I don't like just Special Counsel                                                                                                 |
| 2016-02-2602:37:31, Fri | INBOX  | Although wait, I'm not sure about that                                                                                            |
| 2016-02-2602:37:37, Fri | OUTBOX | Yeah well his [REDACTED] is a cocksucker, he should still be stressed about that.                                                 |
| 2016-02-2602:37:51, Fri | INBOX  | He is                                                                                                                             |
| 2016-02-2602:38:07, Fri | INBOX  | Stressed that his [REDACTED] is the face of the section                                                                           |
| 2016-02-2602:38:39, Fri | OUTBOX | I also think I prefer just counsel. That's why I asked. But think about it.                                                       |

| 2016-02-2602:40:04, Fri | INBOX  | I will. Don't think either of those is quite right. What's your agreed upon title?                                                                                           |
| 2016-02-2602:40:50, Fri | OUTBOX | Special Counsel. But truly, I can put whatever I want on them                                                                                                                |
| 2016-02-2611:05:09, Fri | OUTBOX | [REDACTED]Mtg with the d is 3-3:30, but I think there's a high chance that it will go over. Normally I would just bail, but it's the d and an important legal issue.     |
| 2016-02-2611:21:57, Fri | INBOX  | And I get three hours of Laufman and [REDACTED] n two consecutive meetings this morning. Gosh, today's going to be great                                                     |
| 2016-02-2611:26:05, Fri | INBOX  | There won't be. Bill has MYE wrap at 230, just like he did for DD's function. And if like the one for DD, for which I was late, I won't have time. [REDACTED]                |
| 2016-02-2620:58:36, Fri | INBOX  | [REDACTED] ..hope you didn't mind me busting your balls in front of Trisha. You certainly didn't mind giving me the finger in front of her. \U0001f609                       |
| 2016-02-2721:30:05, Sat | INBOX  | I know! I left it till the last second. Just spent an hour on conference call with Jon and [REDACTED] giving them a dump and discussing path forward. \n\nAnd hi. \U0001f636 |
| 2016-02-2912:55:21, Mon | INBOX  | So [REDACTED] called JB on Sat night to complain about leaks. I need to talk to him today....                                                                                |
| 2016-02-2912:56:25, Mon | OUTBOX | And how the hell does [REDACTED] have Jb's cell phone number?                                                                                                                |
| 2016-02-2912:57:55, Mon | INBOX  | That's the way Washington works. JB told Bill they've known each other for a long time.                                                                                      |
| 2016-02-2912:58:24, Mon | OUTBOX | Oh. I would run by his ofc now - he'd almost always there by now.                                                                                                            |
| 2016-02-2913:11:36, Mon | INBOX  | Ok getting coffee - no time this morning - I will try on the way back.                                                                                                       |
| 2016-02-2913:21:58, Mon | INBOX  | Jim in morning brief with D                                                                                                                                                  |
| 2016-02-2913:28:51, Mon | OUTBOX | Then I would try him again right before 9 if you can.                                                                                                                        |
| 2016-02-2913:42:26, Mon | INBOX  | Will try. Just shot him an email asking for 15                                                                                                                               |
| 2016-02-2913:42:44, Mon | OUTBOX | Talk in 2?                                                                                                                                                                   |
| 2016-02-2913:43:04, Mon | INBOX  | Also I have your notebook. Nope sorry headed into dad mtg.                                                                                                                   |
| 2016-03-0103:07:31, Tue | INBOX  | Just spoke with Bill, he's emailing [REDACTED] and JB to get together first thing. I need to give you details. [REDACTED]                                                    |
| 2016-03-0103:20:03, Tue | OUTBOX | Will try. Need to talk to [REDACTED] then andy about [REDACTED]                                                                                                              |

| 2016-03-0103:24:00, Tue | INBOX  | And about me (actually us, again) seeing them months ago                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| 2016-03-0103:24:16, Tue | INBOX  | He wanted to know if there were specifics rather than rumor and innuendo                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| 2016-03-0103:24:43, Tue | INBOX  | All this makes me weary, [REDACTED]                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| 2016-03-0103:24:57, Tue | OUTBOX | No specifics, just interesting timing.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| 2016-03-0103:25:15, Tue | OUTBOX | I know, [REDACTED] I know.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| 2016-03-0103:25:32, Tue | INBOX  | That's what we meant by specifics. Specifics about him meeting them.                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| 2016-03-0103:26:21, Tue | OUTBOX | Not following. It's not rumor, we/I saw them!                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| 2016-03-0103:28:05, Tue | INBOX  | We're saying the same thing. I told him jg was close to them. He asked if I had specifics. I said I had seen him with one a few months ago, and that you had seen the three of them together last week.                                                                  |
| 2016-03-0111:52:41, Tue | INBOX  | [REDACTED]. \U0001f61e\n\nYou think wraps are generally going to go this late, or is this just a busy time?\n\nAnd that reminds me, I had wanted to ask you about your response to Andy's little dig on [REDACTED] about having all kinds of free time in the [REDACTED] |
| 2016-03-0111:56:10, Tue | OUTBOX | We stayed behind to try to talk to andy about [REDACTED] but then that didn't even work.\n\nYeah, don't think he totally meant it as a dig, but of course it was.                                                                                                        |
| 2016-03-0112:01:14, Tue | INBOX  | That stinks. But at least it's an outlier in staying late. \n\nI wasn't sure. It had an edge.                                                                                                                                                                            |
| 2016-03-0112:02:18, Tue | OUTBOX | Yeah, I'm not so sure it is. I'm getting more convinced that the last few weeks of ease were the anomaly. :(                                                                                                                                                             |
| 2016-03-0112:12:44, Tue | INBOX  | Yeah it sucks, no question about it. Hopefully Andy and everyone will find a rhythm and it will get a little better.                                                                                                                                                   |
| 2016-03-0112:59:39, Tue | INBOX  | Hi. Bill going to brief Andy. [REDACTED] knew not to mention yet, right?                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| 2016-03-0113:01:46, Tue | INBOX  | Also need to talk to you before you talk to Andy on topic                                                                                                                                                                                                                |

| 2016-03-1801:52:09, Fri | INBOX  | Yeah, but you know what bugs me? If you weren't in there, who is supposed to point out all the doubts and qualifications about the reporting, all the potential misinterpretations and exaggerations? that person needs to be in the room. I understand it could be you, but it could be me or somebody else at that level. They should have the benefit of that type of nuance and information, and clearly they don't, or at least they don't enough. They're certainly not getting it out of the so-called senior leaders who are sitting round that table beside Andy. |

| 2016-03-1812:05:54, Fri | INBOX  | And it frustrates me, because Bill, at his 7:15, brings up the whole matter in front of his DADs. One who is acting for Dina. Who immediately goes to John and tell him how Bill is stressed because all the stuff is going on about a special prosecutor. Bill needs to learn to not talk to everybody about this when he's upset about it. And I guarantee that agent, while discreet, is certainly going to tell at least a few other people.\U0001f621\U0001f621\U0001f621\U0001f621\U0001f621\U0001f621                                                               |

| 2016-03-1900:42:58, Sat | INBOX  | Thinking about earlier, I regret not saying more to you and Jim. I should have said, I know Bill is out, but we talked last night. I'm out next week. Since I have you both, here are my thoughts because I know the message doesn't always make it cleanly to the top. Will do that next time. |
| 2016-03-1900:44:35, Sat | INBOX  | Of course I might have still been so out of breath that I sounded like an asthmatic without his inhaler. \U0001f612                                                                                                                                                                             |
| 2016-03-1901:07:44, Sat | OUTBOX | Yeah, would have been a totally reasonable approach. I didn't think of it either.                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| 2016-03-1901:14:18, Sat | INBOX  | Sigh. Missed opportunity. Good news is I think the right message got through. Have it in hand for next time.                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| 2016-03-1902:22:25, Sat | OUTBOX | Sorry, have been on with Bill P for the last 45 or so. He hadn't received any back brief from Mike, which I figured, so I emailed him to let him know I was happy to chat with him on the dl.                                                                                                   |
| 2016-03-1902:23:30, Sat | OUTBOX | I do like him. He gets nuance. I wonder if he gets intimidated/nervous around Andy, or the bluster of the guys, bc he's much more normal just discussing an issue back and forth.                                                                                                               |
| 2016-03-1902:27:23, Sat | OUTBOX | [REDACTED] I had intended to talk to Bill this weekend or Monday and be in bed already, but when if I was free now there was no way I could leave him to wonder like that.                                                                                                                      |

| 2016-03-1902:32:14, Sat | INBOX  | I think some of it is his personality. I think he's naturally sort of old fashioned gentlemanly in a Midwestern sort of way                                                                                                                                                                     |
| 2016-03-1902:32:48, Sat | OUTBOX | He is. I think he was pretty offended by my back and forth with randy.                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| 2016-03-1902:33:33, Sat | INBOX  | It's not intimidation. Which is why I get a little angry at [REDACTED] doing the imitation thing. He's not weak - to the extent he has a weakness, it's the over thinking earnestness, maybe thinking it's a tad bit more thoughtful than it is. But it is genuine without guile.               |
| 2016-03-1902:33:55, Sat | INBOX  | You told him? He should be.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| 2016-03-1902:34:28, Sat | INBOX  | He is paying the price for a number of aggressive but unthoughtful decisions by [REDACTED]                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| 2016-03-1902:34:36, Sat | OUTBOX | I did. | 2016-03-1902:39:52, Sat | INBOX  | But he'd do a better job than [REDACTED].                                                                                                                                                                                                  |
| 2016-03-1902:40:35, Sat | INBOX  | I actually think [REDACTED] would be better than [REDACTED] as Intel ead. But that's a weird call about what that job needs.                                                                                                               |

| 2016-03-1902:41:13, Sat | OUTBOX | I know. I don't think andy meant to be mean. But you know I'll keep an eye out, and will say something if I need to.                                                                                                                       |
| 2016-03-1902:41:47, Sat | OUTBOX | [REDACTED] is good simply because he can bust heads. And division is in desperate need of that.                                                                                                                                            |
| 2016-03-1902:43:04, Sat | INBOX  | You shouldn't, other than maybe the specific behavior. Don't think you're going to change anyone's perception. It's just unfortunate, because Andy is behaving towards him exactly as [REDACTED] and JG and everyone behaved towards Andy. |

| 2016-03-1907:14:54, Sat | INBOX  | [REDACTED] 'mWIDE awake thinking about work. Processing what the team told me yesterday afternoon. I should have told you yesterday, I hadn't processed the significance of it until now. I will need to call [REDACTED] this weekend.                                                                                                                                                          |
| 2016-03-1910:24:12, Sat | OUTBOX | So why the need for [REDACTED] to be so decisive all of a sudden? You need to tell [REDACTED] so she can start pushing this while you're gone.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |

| 2016-03-1915:52:18, Sat | INBOX  | That's fine. I don't know what, if anything, Bill will provide me over the week. Jones will have nothing. I don't think you'll have the time or desire to rehash next weekend what happened on the case over the course of the week. I'll go crazy without an ability to know what's going on, so I'd appreciate it if you would keep me posted if there are case updates /developments. [REDACTED] |
| 2016-03-1916:01:18, Sat | OUTBOX | Yes, of course I will keep you updated re the things I have visibility into, though [REDACTED] will likely be in a better position to report more granular case updates. | 2016-03-2100:33:55, Mon | OUTBOX | I'll be damned if I say anything to Andy. I am going to say something to [REDACTED] Let's see him say I overstepped to my face, when I've had his back sooo many times.                                                                                                               |
| 2016-03-2100:36:48, Mon | INBOX  | I think you should talk to Andy. Talk to [REDACTED], but Andy needs to know. Ultimately he's the guy your working for.                                                                                                                                                                |
| 2016-03-2100:38:14, Mon | OUTBOX | I will not have this conversation with him again. And as I said above (maybe you didn't get it), And the worst part is that even if he agreed with me, Andy would never say anything to [REDACTED] "Agent code" and all.                                                              |
| 2016-03-2100:45:32, Mon | INBOX  | @ 8? @I got that one. It's not so much about him saying anything to [REDACTED] (though he should - I would). It's making sure he's aware and supports it. After all,                                                                                                                  |

| 2016-03-2823:34:32, Mon | INBOX  | Yeah that was my feeling, too. Brian offered several times to ask again and i told him that answer was perfectly fine, just needed to be able to say we did an honest ask at an executive level. Besides, I got him to tell me the whole story of the Apple thing. [REDACTED] |

| 2016-03-2823:37:32, Mon | INBOX  | Also, the more I thought about the meeting this morning and what you're waiting on from [REDACTED] it made me angry. I want - the team needs - your thoughts and input. I get you work for and advise him, but he's not going to relay to anyone, let alone me, your thoughts as the meeting is going on. You're smart and your a good attorney and what you think makes a difference to more than just Andy. Anyway, I value your input and opinion and I'm disappointed i didn't get it at the meeting                                                                                                                                                                 |
| 2016-03-2823:39:16, Mon | OUTBOX | Yup. And it just makes me that much more angry that apparently now I'm supposed to add Bill and Trisha to the list. Whatever. | 2016-03-2823:50:18, Mon | INBOX  | And I'm not commenting on Trisha because I simply don't know. I'm not saying I think you do. \n\nAnd dammit I know [REDACTED] super busy but I worry she has too much going on. I'm going to ask her to have someone in OGC do the atty opinion process research along the lines of what you suggested. I fear too much of what we want and need to ask is going to be construed by DoJ as "opinion." I don't want to ask about each of the 1500, but I do want to say, who gave you guidance about what constituted a record? Who did you ask or rely on to make a decision? Who and under what circumstances would you seek guidance from State? All "opinion," right? |
| 2016-03-2823:57:53, Mon | INBOX  | Also - and you have to reply to each of these (this and above), dammit, don't skimp responses - where did Mike have to go? He left the last brief to the D 45 minutes early as well. Whatever. \n\nWhat points did you make to Andy in the meeting? I assume you'd relay to me at some point as you did the final one but I am curious as to your thoughts along the way.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |

| 2016-03-2900:07:27, Tue | OUTBOX | I do not agree that all are opinion. Opinion is about the attorneys IMPRESSIONS, strength of the case, etc. Understanding what criteria they used to determine whether something was work-related, and whether someone applied those criteria re a particular email, is not opinion. | 2016-03-2900:26:08, Tue | OUTBOX | So I would like to suggest the following to andy, but it depends on how important it really is to you: I really think [REDACTED] should be present for all future calls with D counsel. Enough that I'd be willing to tell Andy, hey, this is a "look George, now I'm coming to you with an ask. We need a person in that room to ensure a trust - filled relationship moving forward. Bc it's starting to deteriorate." Or whatever. |
| 2016-03-2900:26:54, Tue | OUTBOX | A) Then you'd better tell them first thing tomorrow morning. | 2016-03-2900:30:50, Tue | OUTBOX | No more proffers. Period. God, I need to let this go. I can actually feel my blood pressure rising.                                                                                                                                                                                |
| 2016-03-2900:32:42, Tue | OUTBOX | And btw, it's all well and good that you like [REDACTED] but I think he's an arrogant *sshole. [REDACTED] agrees, which makes it dispositive for me. I get he's the best you've got on that team, and maybe he's in fact good, but that doesn't change my fundamental read on him. |
| 2016-03-2900:33:48, Tue | OUTBOX | And I swear [REDACTED] that it has nothing to do with our exchange at the end. I actually thought that was quite reasonable.                                                                                                                                                       |
| 2016-03-2900:35:52, Tue | INBOX  | A) me either. Let's see how this week goes. And I'll send something via email tomorrow. \n [REDACTED][REDACTED] \nD) he may be an asshole. | 2016-03-2900:36:55, Tue | OUTBOX | I can't put my finger on it. His demeanor the whole time. I don't think he is used to or likes to be disagreed with.                                                                                                                                                               |
| 2016-03-2900:37:12, Tue | INBOX  | And I GUARANTEE they will proffer more with Beth! Nothing was said today that they wouldnt, in fact, my take away was they were pretty clear they intended to!                                                                                                                     |
| 2016-03-2900:38:35, Tue | OUTBOX | No more proffers! We made clear that we needed an exchange with the witnesses. | 2016-03-2900:39:30, Tue | OUTBOX | And what is this I like some as shoes bullshit. Name me one. Not someone funny snarky and can be a d*ck. I mean an arrogant asshole.                                                                                                                                               |
| 2016-03-2900:39:56, Tue | OUTBOX | Yes, I just wanted to make sure you understood it was not about that in any way.                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| 2016-03-2900:40:10, Tue | INBOX  | They will want to do both. You HEARD them say they wanted to follow up the proffer with her. Do you think Andy/Jim have the same hard no proffer line/understanding?                                                                                                               |
| 2016-03-2900:40:38, Tue | INBOX  | [REDACTED] apparently.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| 2016-03-2900:41:03, Tue | OUTBOX | I'll ask, but probably no. I don't think they care if they continue, so long as we get in front of the witnesses.                                                                                                                                                                  |

| 2016-03-2900:49:34, Tue | INBOX  | Look. I think he very much believes in equity and fairness (notice in didn't say kindness - that may be, but i dont know him that well). I think he has a fundamental mistrust of headquarters. DOJ, mainly, but FBI too. I think he can be arrogant and doesn't like being disagreed with until he's measured you up and decided he's OK with you. That may make him arrogant, or rebellious. But I don't think it makes him an asshole. |

| 2016-03-2912:08:30, Tue | INBOX  | definitely needs to say something. That's no good having to work that way, feeling that way.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |
| 2016-03-2912:57:50, Tue | INBOX  | Yay. I'm ready when you are. Bill is stopping by my office at 9:45, something from upstairs this morning                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| 2016-03-2915:46:43, Tue | INBOX  | Hey Trisha pushed the noon meeting. Call or stop by if you can before lunch re email drafting.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| 2016-03-2923:30:56, Tue | INBOX  | Also  said he would send the draft email on to Andy tonight. Don't know why, but if you talk to him, want you to give me some credit in the drafting of that thing. Doesn't make a big difference I guess.Also, Tricia email to apologize for changing yesterday to Monday. She said she had convinced herself that today was already Wednesday. I told her not to worry about it, that some weeks were like that, and that it was probably better to put the day of the week in there anyway. |
| 2016-03-2923:37:02, Tue | OUTBOX | I will. Was going to say pete  and I drafted it so it should be good to go.Poor Trisha. That's rough.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| 2016-03-3001:04:24, Wed | INBOX  | been talking to  about you. I will show you tomorrow.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |

| 2016-03-3100:10:35, Thu | INBOX  | Briefed Bill, he intended to tell Mike to brief Andy. Gave him enough copies.                                                                                                                                                                 |
| 2016-03-3100:11:39, Thu | OUTBOX | I get that, but maybe an actual brief since that's what doj is getting and I don't think you'd want your DD not to know everything they do right?                                                                                             |

| 2016-03-3100:59:57, Thu | INBOX | Here's the thing re case brief - I don't know how to stress importance without Jones deciding to invite himself. \n\nAnd truly, I think Bill will convey enough detail. And if Andy/Mike want more, they can ask. \n\nInterestingly, we'd brief internals somewhat regularly to EAD. Haven't with Mike. Also, he's sat down for big briefs with 1 and 3 (not sure about 2). Not us. Maybe he figures he'll hear about them if he needs to. I may also suggest to Bill that he my want to get a section significant case briefing. |
| 2016-03-3115:43:12, Thu | INBOX | Talked with Bill and Trisha and [REDACTED] Will tell you on the way to lunch - call me when you're clear.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |

I have a problem with the amount it has been a point of controversy since then, the amount that "that girl with the question" has clearly been discussed.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |

He may have spoken to ██████ after I brought it up with him. \n\nI think - and I may wrong - you are conflating the motives behind Randy Andy and ██████ with the ones at the meeting. The former is more along the lines of what you're saying. The meeting wasn't a function of yur age or gender. ██████ would have responded exactly the same way to a 45 year old male from the DD's office saying what you did. |

I gotta say, when he sent the email, and then was so concerned by my reaction that he followed up with that call, my overall feeling was "oh good, he cares!" I'm even okay with him caring out of a selfish desire because he really wants me to keep working for him. And so now I just feel like a suckered maybe? Guess he didn't care enough. |

I think he would have taken it head on and addressed it, but he's such a different person, he would have done it in an awkward shucks-y way. | 2016-04-1002:09:14, Sun | INBOX           | Because you know where I was on Thursday or Friday night - when I was complaining about everyone expecting me to deliver the hard message while they vacillated in discussing with their counterparts. About how my sense of justness and character was at odds with waiting until Sat to say something. \n\nAnd rightfully, you point out stop being so prima donna-ish and just do it. \n\nAnd i do. \n\nAnd then I find out an hour later that in addition to what I was asked to do, JB went to counsel and had the discussion he did. And I'm the one facing the music. From some who I have known for a long time. Nobody else pays the price. Nobody else will have the same straight hard discussion. Yet I'm the only one who violated his sense of integrity to swallow hard and deliver the message. |

But I think you have every right to be angry and frustrated about being left out of the loop on your investigation, especially when you're going to be left holding the bag. And I think you're entitled to say something to Baker about that, though on this one I would probably discuss with Bill first.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |

| 2016-04-1122:19:37, Mon | INBOX           | [REDACTED] Just talked with Bill, who spoke with everyone this morning. Will fill you in tonight or tomorrow. \n\nAlso, he was under the impression Andy wanted the meeting and a prebrief with FBI only just before. I think [REDACTED] may have screwed up that scheduling. Can you check? Obviously want to confirm with him before going to [REDACTED]                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |

| 2016-04-1123:13:06, Mon | INBOX           | Oof. Laufman just left me a minute long message. Don't think I'm going to listen tonight. \n\nAnd it's weird. CES always shows as "restricted" when the call is coming in but then shows true name afterwards on the call list. Needless to say, I screen all restricted calls...                                                                                                              |
| 2016-04-1300:40:33, Wed | INBOX           | Talked with [REDACTED] for a while. She couldn't remember who said the D was going to talk to the AG on Sun night or Mon about this.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |
| 2016-04-1302:21:03, Wed | INBOX           | My point in forwarding the email was to talk about how we get to a productive place                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| 2016-04-1302:22:07, Wed | OUTBOX          | We'll get there, but for this meeting I'd solely just be taking [REDACTED] lead.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| 2016-04-1302:29:48, Wed | INBOX           | Well sure, but would be nice to know what that lead is in advance rather than, I don't know, f*ck me in the *ss without saying anything, kinda like [REDACTED] calling counsel the night before. \n\nToo much negative done to expect benefit of the doubt.                                                                                                                                    |
| 2016-04-1310:55:35, Wed | INBOX           | [REDACTED] Maybe we can find some time to talk today about the MYE thing? Really need to put it to rest. I can talk now.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| 2016-04-1400:37:11, Thu | INBOX           | Thank you. \U0001f636 \n\nWas obviously constrained on my comments. What I identified IS what bothers me the most. And the rest is nonsense.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| 2016-04-1400:39:56, Thu | OUTBOX          | And I think that frustration is fair. But it doesn't change the fundamental okay-ness of the prior two decisions (the summation and the call to her). It just means it would be best to handle it differently in the future. And Jim WILL understand that. Just talk to him, one on one. You don't need to get Bill's permission, clear through him, just go talk to him. It will all be fine. |
| 2016-04-1401:11:35, Thu | INBOX           | I will. He told Bill on Monday he'd be happy to talk to me any time.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |

| 2016-04-2800:49:05, Thu | INBOX           | [REDACTED] Thank you. I'm sure the "experts" in nsd will be happy I call him. \n\nBtw, how utterly f*cked up is it that George was by far and away the most aggressive DoJ person in the room today?    |
| 2016-04-2823:13:42, Thu | INBOX           | Dude, your wrap is loooong. Waiting on Bill before reaching out to CES, also curious as to your thoughts about revised statement - Bill really wants to write something.\n\nYou have a while to go yet? |
| 2016-04-2900:30:35, Fri | INBOX           | Sorry one work Q I forgot - D mentioned [REDACTED] Do you think that was something someone inside related to him or his outside checking up?                                                            |
| 2016-04-2900:32:13, Fri | OUTBOX          | He no doubt called [REDACTED]                                                                                                                                                                           |
| 2016-04-2900:33:29, Fri | INBOX           | Makes sense. Wasn't sure if it was something he heard from JB or Andy via the team                                                                                                                      |
| 2016-04-2900:44:50, Fri | OUTBOX          | My guess is complaints from jb and Andy about the low levels of engagement at doj led to discussions of who is on the team...                                                                           |

| 2016-05-1123:28:18, Wed | OUTBOX          | [REDACTED] is the only real prosecutor.                                                                                                                                                                       |
| 2016-05-1123:54:20, Wed | OUTBOX          | I am. Going out with [REDACTED] now to get food.                                                                                                                                                              |
| 2016-05-1202:30:36, Thu | OUTBOX          | BTW fwiw, [REDACTED] still in the ofc with me.                                                                                                                                                                |
| 2016-05-1211:08:54, Thu | OUTBOX          | Totally off topic, but I'm kind of bummed: Randy offered to take Andy to the offsite using a Blackhawk on Monday. It's easier for him to have [REDACTED] drive, bc it's relatively closer from here. Wah wah. |
| 2016-05-1211:11:37, Thu | INBOX           | And I'll start percolating [REDACTED] up next week. Figure a week or two to discuss, then calendar. Though honestly I wonder if it's stupid to even consider before the 15th                                  |
| 2016-05-1211:12:08, Thu | INBOX           | Two days is doable, though, assuming it's not the week he wants to make the speech                                                                                                                            |
| 2016-05-1211:14:20, Thu | OUTBOX          | Yeah, it probably is. And there's a strong risk andy will say you're too important to the case and need to stay here.                                                                                         |
| 2016-05-1211:18:04, Thu | OUTBOX          | Re [REDACTED], yeah, but it might end up being him and I and a hunch of others too, and I don't really want that. That's what happened last time.                                                             |
| 2016-05-1212:32:52, Thu | INBOX           | I think I need to excuse my team and talk to doj, again, his morning at 11 about timeliness                                                                                                                   |
| 2016-05-1213:06:57, Thu | INBOX           | Talking with Jon about DoJ. Would like you here - how far out are you?                                                                                                                                        |

| 2016-05-1222:46:24, Thu | INBOX           | Just finished. Will call. On the way out Eric asked (he suggested no) if we needed the meeting tomorrow afternoon                                                                                 |
| 2016-05-1222:48:06, Thu | OUTBOX          | Did you ask Andy if he still wanted to meet tomorrow?                                                                                                                                             |
| 2016-05-1222:49:41, Thu | INBOX           | I did not. I had left when Eric caught me. I told Eric I deferred to Andy about whether or not we needed to meet. We did not talk about what we planned to tell the D on Mon.                     |
| 2016-05-1223:39:39, Thu | INBOX           | Spoke to [REDACTED] and relayed Andy's message. Told him Andy was relaying to Carlin. Richard said he'd wait to hear from on high. Carlin and George are definitely going to have to message down |
| 2016-05-1223:50:01, Thu | OUTBOX          | Can I send that to Andy.                                                                                                                                                                          |

| 2016-05-1601:06:08, Mon | INBOX           | [REDACTED] Talked to Bill for about an hour. He mentioned email, said he would send (though he hasn't yet). He had a slightly different take than I did but we'll get there. His primary concern is asking DoJ in such a way that they respond straight to the D (which I can see happening) without us getting a chance to review for accuracy / spin.                                                |

I think [REDACTED] is ambivalent, for a lot of reasons you understand. \n\nAnd as you said, you work for Andy. And you get exposure to and credit for a billion other things the team never will. Just happens that this one case is a big deal right now. It God willing won't be in a couple of months. If you want to tdy out you could be full time in a New York minute.\n\nI'm trying to understand the underlying source of your frustration - it's across everything that came up yesterday - my miscommunication as you drove in about talking to [REDACTED] to start the SW conversation, about my interaction with Bill about Jones, now about this. \n\nI think it's a struggle with recognition vs result, with soft power. And I worry a bit that your broad consideration of it is getting all distilled down and played out, fairly or unfairly, over this. [REDACTED] |

| 2016-05-2113:44:58, Sat | INBOX           | Hey sent you some email going around this morning. Don't know if you noted one of them from last night, [REDACTED] said [REDACTED] never responded to his email for update. We're talking in an hour, I'm going to encourage him to speak to Andy and [REDACTED] about it, that it's undermining his position and effectiveness (to Andy) and that it's unprofessional (to [REDACTED]). Obvious problem is its not easy for any [REDACTED] to say that to the DD, nor [REDACTED] personality. \n\nThe best way may simply be for him to say to Andy, you know, I contacted [REDACTED] to follow up on the D's request and he didn't so much as send me an email, even to tell me he was going to talk to you. Let Andy infer the right leadership action / response. |

| 2016-06-0812:16:01, Wed | INBOX           | I'm REALLY angry about the consent letter right now. Much worse than last night. \n\nIt's the little things, like her writing no agents will participate in the otd review. That sense of entitlement about how we staff is the result of Andy not simply saying "no" to doj about the obnoxious filter staffing demand |

| 2016-06-1501:15:02, Wed | INBOX           | On September 13, 2007, Martin appeared on Comedy Central's The Colbert Report to discuss Mother Teresa's fifty-year sense of abandonment by God which had much coverage in the media at the time. Martin appeared several more times on The Colbert Report, once to discuss Pope Benedict XVI's visit to the U.S. in April, 2008,[8] and again on February 23, 2009 to discuss how poverty (or, at least, reducing the importance one places on material goods) can bring one closer to God.[9]\n\nOn March 18, 2010, Martin was invited to the program in the wake of Glenn Beck's suggesting that Catholics run away from priests who preach "social justice." [10] Martin noted that "social justice addresses the things that keep people poor" and "asks you why are these people poor." He added that "Christ asked us to work with the poor. ... In the Gospel of Matthew He says that the way that we're going to be judged at the end of our lives is not what church we prayed in or how we prayed but really ... how we treated the poor." |

| 2016-06-1902:19:54, Sun | INBOX           | Doj will be fine. They'll huff and puff but ultimately what are they going to do? Truly. In 4 hours? They can barely assemble a conference call in that time. . |
| 2016-06-1902:20:53, Sun | INBOX           | Announce at 11 and you lose and hour and a half to lunch time confusion anyway. It'll be Ok...                                                                  |
| 2016-06-1902:28:47, Sun | OUTBOX          | They can tell the D no. And he really wants to avoid straight up insubordination if he can...                                                                   |
| 2016-06-1915:15:51, Sun | OUTBOX          | Florida has a different rule re represented parties. It is really bad for us.                                                                                   |
| 2016-06-1915:16:20, Sun | INBOX           | Oh. What was the answer? All this based on bar rules                                                                                                            |
| 2016-06-1915:19:29, Sun | OUTBOX          | Yup. Pretty much as soon as we tell usao, we are prohibited from making any contact. Terrible disincentive to not talk to your usao.                            |
| 2016-06-1919:34:32, Sun | INBOX           | Funny how it all comes down to state bar rules. Seems very capricious, like there should be some supremacy clause to get us out of it...                        |
| 2016-06-1919:34:44, Sun | INBOX           | And damn...a mess that made its way up to DD level?                                                                                                             |
| 2016-06-1920:07:35, Sun | OUTBOX          | It didn't apply to us, until dumas congress passed mcdade.                                                                                                      |
| 2016-06-1920:07:57, Sun | OUTBOX          | Yes. Big implications for the continues investigation against ██████████                                                                                        |
| 2016-06-1920:20:47, Sun | INBOX           | Yep, well, maybe this is the chance for a legislative fix. More important than half assed gun sale notification....                                             |

| 2016-07-0117:56:08, Fri | INBOX  | Any intrigue on the MYE front? \n\nAnd damn it's going to be miserable to have you away for a week..... \U0001f636\U0001f636\U0001f636\U0001f636                                                                                                     |
| 2016-07-0118:01:45, Fri | OUTBOX | No, didn't talk about mye except for if I saw the lynch articles.                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| 2016-07-0118:29:13, Fri | INBOX  | Going in to wrap with Bill. This ought to be interesting.                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| 2016-07-0120:20:51, Fri | INBOX  | Oof. Hi. Sounds like a comparatively reduced - stress day, though. \u263a\n\nJust talked to Andy for an hour. Have MANY details for you. Have to write something with Jon and [REDACTED] now, let me know if you want/can talk around 4:45 or later? |
| 2016-07-0120:29:12, Fri | OUTBOX | Yes, he mentioned you were meeting. Let me know when you are free to talk.                                                                                                                                                                           |
| 2016-07-0120:33:01, Fri | OUTBOX | Did you guys ever write the disclaimer on the lhm?                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| 2016-07-0120:33:47, Fri | OUTBOX | Damn. Just saw your article.                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| 2016-07-0120:37:31, Fri | INBOX  | Writing that now. And yes, damn re article. Says the FBI declined comment. Great job, NPO.                                                                                                                                                           |
| 2016-07-0120:38:17, Fri | OUTBOX | What were they supposed to say?                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| 2016-07-0120:39:17, Fri | INBOX  | Nothing! But they were supposed to give us a heads up instead of the dead silence we got!!!!                                                                                                                                                         |
| 2016-07-0120:39:33, Fri | INBOX  | This is slightly notable news                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| 2016-07-0121:44:56, Fri | INBOX  | FYI the thing Jon just sent DoJ is having real agita about. I have talked with both Laufman and [REDACTED] explained the reason why we want it.                                                                                                      |
| 2016-07-0121:52:34, Fri | OUTBOX | Why would they have an issue?                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |

| 2016-07-0223:59:24, Sat | INBOX  | And how do we do investigation after D announces we've completed it? We believe we know the guy who did brief, [REDACTED]                          |
| 2016-07-0300:06:46, Sun | OUTBOX | Because the D says he's not going to say complete, just nearly complete or something like that.                                                    |
| 2016-07-0300:08:10, Sun | INBOX  | Ok. [REDACTED] We can go there. Any other due outs? I suppose I should just wait to talk to you.                                                   |
| 2016-07-0300:08:48, Sun | OUTBOX | No, just that they both thought it would be important to get the answer to the questions about her security indoctrination, ongoing training, etc. |
| 2016-07-0300:09:07, Sun | OUTBOX | And I imagine you can probably just do it by phone.                                                                                                |
| 2016-07-0300:10:19, Sun | INBOX  | True. Of course I want to hear what they said when they decided not to talk about the future on the call...\n [REDACTED]                           |
| 2016-07-0300:10:50, Sun | OUTBOX | He didn't talk to me about that.                                                                                                                   |
| 2016-07-0300:11:23, Sun | INBOX  | Oh. Well, darn. Anything else?                                                                                                                     |
| 2016-07-0300:11:34, Sun | INBOX  | Rybicki coming in with D tomorrow...                                                                                                               |
| 2016-07-0300:11:48, Sun | OUTBOX | No, not that I can think of.                                                                                                                       |
| 2016-07-0300:12:12, Sun | OUTBOX | Man, I so want to be there. You going in?                                                                                                          |
| 2016-07-0300:12:52, Sun | INBOX  | No. They most certainly would not invite me up/in.                                                                                                 |
| 2016-07-0300:13:08, Sun | INBOX  | What are they doing? Rehearsing?                                                                                                                   |
| 2016-07-0300:13:27, Sun | OUTBOX | That's my guess.                                                                                                                                   |
| 2016-07-0300:17:20, Sun | INBOX  | Is Andy going in tomorrow? And have you asked to see the all employee email?                                                                       |
| 2016-07-0300:18:04, Sun | OUTBOX | I don't know if he is. Good question. I'll ask tomorrow or Monday. Remind me.                                                                      |

| 2016-07-0312:55:21, Sun | INBOX  | Did you read the nyt write up this morning? \n\nThe interview had been weeks in the making as law enforcement officials and Mrs. Clinton\u2019s team coordinated schedules. Democrats also hoped that holding the interview on a holiday weekend might ease the anticipated storm.\n\nIn a telephone interview with Chuck Todd on MSNBC after her meeting, Mrs. Clinton said, \u201cI\u2019ve been eager to do it, and I was pleased to have the opportunity to assist the department in bringing its review to a conclusion.\u201d\n\nAccompanying Mrs. Clinton into the meeting were her lawyer David E. Kendall; Cheryl D. Mills and Heather Samuelson, longtime aides who are also lawyers; and two lawyers from Mr. Kendall\u2019s firm, Williams & Connolly, Katherine Turner and Amy Saharia.\n\nEight officials from the F.B.I. and the Department of Justice conducted the interview, according to a person who was familiar with the substance of the session but declined to be named because the meeting was private. This person characterized the meeting as \u201ccivil\u201d and \u201cbusinesslike.\u201d |

| 2016-07-0419:07:37, Mon | INBOX  | Just talked to Bill...he's going to think about whether or not to pass on. Has some concern that this is late, and whether it's worth changing given all the practice that like happened yesterday. I told him he could always bounce off of Andy or JR to get their thoughts. |

| 2016-07-1323:55:55, Wed | INBOX  | Btw, didn't get a chance to follow up after this morning. 1) how do you think it went? Andy seemed a little p*ssed/short on time. His "let Stephen finish" to me worried me a bit except he did it to JB and a bunch of other people, too.\n2) in the wildly unlikely event I have to testify (and tell me I'm right about that - I think it's unlikely and even less likely I'd go outside of a group), I'm leaning on you to prep the hell out of me. |

| 2016-07-1922:22:44, Tue | OUTBOX | No. Jim said he needed letter pushed to Thursday, andy said that was fine. Not sure about mtg tomorrow.                                                                  |
| 2016-07-1922:22:58, Tue | OUTBOX | You guys ready with thoughts re referral?                                                                                                                                |
| 2016-07-1922:24:41, Tue | INBOX  | I still haven't seen referral. Lync'd [REDACTED] about it earlier. \n\nAnd no. WF went through it and had comments, but I want to read it myself. Going to read tonight. |
| 2016-07-1922:26:15, Tue | OUTBOX | So why are you clamoring for a meeting if you're not ready to talk about your thoughts re the referral? That's one of the things on the list, right?                     |
| 2016-07-1922:26:43, Tue | OUTBOX | It's one of the emails that got forwarded from Kelly last week, I think.                                                                                                 |
| 2016-07-1922:27:03, Tue | INBOX  | Phew. I'm really glad. Was feeling just awful. \n\nI'm NOT clamoring for a meeting. Everyone is asking if we can have more time.                                         |
| 2016-07-1922:27:18, Tue | INBOX  | Plus, DOJ wants to sit down and do a walk thru of everything for [REDACTED]                                                                                              |
| 2016-07-1922:28:28, Tue | OUTBOX | Bottom line is there is not a meeting scheduled for tomorrow, and unless people want one, I wasn't planning on pushing for one.                                          |

| 2016-07-2212:54:01, Fri | OUTBOX | I'm talking to [REDACTED] about American exceptionalism right now.                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| 2016-07-2213:01:04, Fri | OUTBOX | Pretty strongly in favor. As I said to [REDACTED] doesn't mean we're perfect or do everything right, but as a system of government, country of laws, I think we're pretty damn great.                                                              |
| 2016-07-2213:03:44, Fri | INBOX  | But there's a difference between that and exceptionalism. Just look at the word. It implies not only that we're great, but that you suck. And that we are better and you should change to be like us. It goes hand in hand with American arrogance |

| 2016-07-2700:37:35, Wed | INBOX  | Did you watch the D's happy birthday fbi message?                                                                                                                                       |
| 2016-07-2700:47:48, Wed | OUTBOX | I didn't yet - I worked my tail off today. I heard he made a Clinton reference though, no?                                                                                              |
| 2016-07-2700:50:29, Wed | INBOX  | He did. Any referenced - again - that it wasn't just his decision, that it was the teams'                                                                                               |
| 2016-07-2700:52:32, Wed | INBOX  | More than a reference. Two points: terrorism Miami St Bernadino everywhere we're vigilant; second, HRC. Right decision. You may disagree but don't you dare think or say it was biased. |
| 2016-07-2700:53:11, Wed | INBOX  | Thinking of having lunch with Randy and seeking his support at the board. What do you think?                                                                                            |

| 2016-08-0500:12:06, Fri | INBOX  | Gonna take more than 5 minutes. Or, give Andy the questions /issues for an answer later.                                                                                                                                                                            |
| 2016-08-0500:12:57, Fri | OUTBOX | It's quick and informal. And this is not going to be the last opportunity to talk about this. Especially if [REDACTED] there will be lots of time to discuss.                                                                                                       |
| 2016-08-0500:16:24, Fri | INBOX  | I get it. I'm not talking about options so much as the difficult questions are ones that I'm directly involved with. \n\nBut OK. I will. If you were in my spot, wouldn't you want to go? For examole, I have no desire to be at the joint run through with Cyber . |
| 2016-08-0500:17:35, Fri | OUTBOX | And [REDACTED] how many meeting are you at that Jon has an equal right and contribution to make that he is not at?                                                                                                                                                  |
| 2016-08-0500:18:27, Fri | INBOX  | Those times I can invite him, I do.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| 2016-08-0500:18:57, Fri | INBOX  | And I, for example, the agency said today their group is too big to come to us. So we either go to them, and Jon is out, or reschedule till next week. What should I do?                                                                                            |
| 2016-08-0500:19:33, Fri | INBOX  | Re your question, I can think of two with Andy.                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |

| 2016-08-0500:20:33, Fri | OUTBOX | Pete, I'm not going to fight with you about this. You asked for my opinion, I gave it to you.                                                                                                                |
| 2016-08-0500:21:59, Fri | INBOX  | And push till next week? We willing to bear the "FBI is delaying" line?                                                                                                                                      |
| 2016-08-0500:22:57, Fri | OUTBOX | The work right now is all analytical. Does Monday make a difference? Will the other analysts go?                                                                                                             |
| 2016-08-0500:27:23, Fri | INBOX  | My concern is the perceived delay of not doing it this week. A day clearly doesn't matter, though we pushed till the end of this week at my request due to not being available at the beginning of the week. |
| 2016-08-0500:27:50, Fri | INBOX  | And it's not just analysis. And, shockingly, agents are also capable of analysis as well...                                                                                                                  |

| 2016-08-0500:29:32, Fri | OUTBOX | I asked if the other analysts would be going.                                                                                                                                                                |
| 2016-08-0500:32:40, Fri | INBOX  | That's up to Jon. I just told him I was calling [REDACTED] and telling her he needs to be there and to reschedule to Monday unless he doesn't want to do that.                                               |
| 2016-08-0500:33:00, Fri | OUTBOX | Are you going by yourself or planning to take others?                                                                                                                                                        |

| 2016-08-0920:42:46, Tue | INBOX  | Hey I ran into Bill, he wants to keep the brief smaller. His point (which I hadn't thought of) is Andy is more likely to share his internal thinking in front of a smaller group of people he knows rather than a larger group. Plus, fysa/atmospherics, Bill noted "it's just so hard to get time with him." Whether true or not that's Bills perception. Thought you'd want to know |

Moffa and I had the immediate same reaction                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| 2016-08-1023:52:58, Wed | INBOX  | In fairness, from the email it's not clear what wf is proposing to do                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| 2016-08-1100:13:09, Thu | INBOX  | And hey, I read that wfo email again and it's just a press inquiry and confusion/suggestion [REDACTED] might be linked to it...not consideration of opening a case.                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| 2016-08-1100:33:54, Thu | OUTBOX | Got it. Yeah, the press inquiry was brief at wrap. Didn't mention to ddm                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |

| 2016-08-1710:47:25, Wed | INBOX  | Thats fair.I think somt times it's not directed (or not meant to be directed) at you, it's expressing frustration. I want to vent and you're the only place (because of both friendship and shared knowledge of the email) that I can. I'm aware you probably hear me in even those times and either don't need me to tell you what I'm telling you, feel like I'm asking you do do something about it, or both. And sometimes, I'm just looking for a little validation. Yes, the Andy - George dynamic did cause some problems. Yes, Jim in particular isn't always good at email distro. Thats all.Anyway, all of this probably better talked about it person, or not at all. I'm tired of it, and I hate myself during it (and I then remember you saying, well, at least you're seeing it in yourself. So change) |

| 2016-08-3009:10:05, Tue | INBOX  | Yeah but that's generally not Ok (re Mike). He came in late to MYE and has been in and out of [REDACTED]. And he HAD the TPs for this, he just chose not to read them. Because Jon made sure to send them to Dina and Bill and Mike, but still hasn't sent them to me. \n\nThats what I'm saying - there's some stuff that's reasonable for me to ask and not reasonable for Jon not to do - hey dude, email me, just cc; the TPs please - and stuff that isn't. \n\nAnd this is only a tiny bit of ALL the stuff going on. | 2016-09-0201:55:38, Fri | OUTBOX | Forgot to show you this text from Eric, who is essentially blaming me for Andy's late hours:\n\nGood deal. I also want to stay a little tighter in the future so we can ensure Unity of effort for both Andy and the whole floor. This will also help in streamlining any after wrap discussions with Andy as I want to try and get him out the door at a more reasonable hour than what he has been doing. And that goes for you too! | 2016-09-0700:13:21, Wed | INBOX  | Lisa. It's not. I was feeling the same resentment. My boss told me specifically I was mentioned, including in the context of Pete going around the chain of command to get Lisa to feed something to Andy. I did not make that up. I am not exaggerating that. Thus isn't ALL you, nor is it a zero sum game, not is it a comparison or competition. But simply waving my concerns aside, saying "it's all me." isn't accurate. |

| 2016-09-0723:16:20, Wed | OUTBOX | But i am absolutely enraged. He is purposefully choosing to save Mike and Dave's face at my expense.                                                                                    |
| 2016-09-0723:39:22, Wed | INBOX  | Lis. You must talk to him. But don't do it tonight.                                                                                                                                     |
| 2016-09-0723:39:26, Wed | INBOX  | I'm sorry. You must be livid                                                                                                                                                            |
| 2016-09-0723:40:10, Wed | OUTBOX | I am. I texted him this:\n\nI would like to speak to you before you talk to Steinbach and Bowdich about their email.                                                                    |
| 2016-09-0723:40:47, Wed | OUTBOX | So it doesn't have to be tonight; we'll see what he says.                                                                                                                               |
| 2016-09-0800:19:34, Thu | INBOX  | Of course let me know how it goes with JB. And if he's not there, call me \U0001f614\u2764                                                                                              |
| 2016-09-0800:31:52, Thu | INBOX  | Great. Now i have daily meetings, twice a day either CyD. An hour long each. 930-1030 and 4-5.                                                                                          |
| 2016-09-0800:32:35, Thu | INBOX  | Because their division is in incapable of pulling its head out of its ass. I don't have two hours a day to give to this b**.                                                         |
| 2016-09-0800:44:47, Thu | INBOX  | Now I'm livid....I do not have two hours a day to throw at this.                                                                                                                        |
| 2016-09-0800:45:08, Thu | OUTBOX | You should be. That's an utter waste.                                                                                                                                                   |
| 2016-09-0800:45:33, Thu | OUTBOX | Twice a day. That is so outrageous.                                                                                                                                                     |
| 2016-09-0800:46:31, Thu | INBOX  | And inexplicably, no one, not even after the director's comments today, is willing to say: cyber is f up. Cyber needs to fix itself. Cybers way of doing business is unacceptable. |
| 2016-09-0800:47:00, Thu | OUTBOX | Well that's the profile in courage of you EAD.                                                                                                                                          |
| 2016-09-0800:47:05, Thu | INBOX  | Instead, everybody has to be a little wrong, everybody has to be a little right. Randy and Mike bear nothing. They grind their divisions under them to a halt.                          |
| 2016-09-0800:48:38, Thu | INBOX  | So instead, other stuff will drop. I hope Andy in the director happy. I hope the opportunity cost to the FBI is worth it.                                                               |
| 2016-09-0801:18:21, Thu | OUTBOX | Sorry for the delay, was just on with [REDACTED]. God, I see right through her...                                                                                                       |

| 2016-09-0801:57:23, Thu | OUTBOX | How's he doing? He's a decent human being. And not an egomaniac.                                                 |
| 2016-09-0801:57:24, Thu | INBOX  | Mye notwithstanding, I really like him. Huge heart                                                               |
| 2016-09-0801:58:24, Thu | INBOX  | And god, now I want to know what Andy said. Like Right Now.                                                      |
| 2016-09-0801:58:30, Thu | INBOX  | He's good.                                                                                                       |

| 2016-09-0823:38:31, Thu | OUTBOX | It was honestly very helpful. Not that he told me anything I didn't know (7th floor is political, perception matters, etc.), but just him simply acknowledging the issues, the balancing that needs to happen, how you still won't please everyone gives me the room to include him more in the failings I report to Andy, etc. |

| 2016-09-1412:23:28, Wed | INBOX  | Btw, talked with Bill at length about [REDACTED] (in the context of going through what's going on). In a way that didn't burn any source, he said he hasn't had any coordination on this, that he never discussed (or wants) giving anything up, and that if anything, ITC efforts should be located within one Branch with CD and CYD and SecD. Said Steinbach also thought the same. Though of course he's out this week, all week. |

| 2016-09-1423:02:53, Wed | INBOX  | With a Legat over an issue. I'll tell you tomorrow. May eventually hit Andy. I'm sure you've heard of it. \n\nRemembered vaguely more detail from mtg. Andy mentioned he was still hearing ("3 or 4 instances") recently that info was not flowing quickly enough and more re Mike and Randy and his previous convo with them. \n\nHappy to discuss now or tomorrow. I just had 10-11 open up...                                      |

| 2016-09-1910:35:02, Mon | INBOX  | Hi. Not sure I'm up for this job. Up past midnight worrying about the thing I told you about on Saturday morning. There's always going to be something to worry about. And I'm not able to turn it off right now.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| 2016-09-1910:51:58, Mon | OUTBOX | Hi. I'm sorry. We can control that part, I would try not to worry about it.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| 2016-09-1911:08:09, Mon | INBOX  | Sorry got up super late and scrambling. I hope so, re work thing. It really bothers me. My general upset has settled into disappointment at putting Bill in a bad spot and anger at the others for having tried to do the right thing for the right reasons.                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| 2016-09-1911:09:46, Mon | OUTBOX | You didn't put Bill in a bad spot. You've done exactly what he's wanted you to do.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| 2016-09-1912:03:13, Mon | INBOX  | See, this is the crap that aggravates me: I specifically DIDN'T tell Bill about the new Intel we got on Fri on [REDACTED] so that [REDACTED] could present it. Then [REDACTED] runs in this morning and does it without me. Whatever....                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| 2016-09-1912:25:19, Mon | OUTBOX | I know. But you have a LOT more access to bill than he does. It's not that important. He's feeling insecure. Let it go...                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| 2016-09-1912:26:57, Mon | INBOX  | Hmmm. Sure, but. We've got a good working relationship because stuff like this doesn't happen. I'll say something, nicely.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| 2016-09-1912:31:32, Mon | OUTBOX | Okay. \n\nAnd yes, Thursday works. I told Jim that [REDACTED] and I are going to have a talk with Andy, asked if I could talk to him about it first.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| 2016-09-1912:37:42, Mon | OUTBOX | And re [REDACTED] I still think I disagree. It would be one thing if he told Bill first. But why do you actually NEED to be there? | 2016-09-2010:38:56, Tue | INBOX  | Right. And [REDACTED] already prepped for the other stuff, him not knowing other stuff may help. We are already taking two, out of a three agency panel. I would need to bump him to go. I'll talk to Bill - think it might be smarter to brief him up on what not to say/red lines rather than me learn [REDACTED] stuff...                                                                              |

| 2016-10-0721:45:45, Fri | INBOX  | Rethought my response to the CYD advisory. Think it's probably good for morale.                                              |
| 2016-10-0812:35:47, Sat | INBOX  | Currently reading about Trump. Wondering if he stepped down if Pence could actually get elected.                             |
| 2016-10-0812:36:20, Sat | OUTBOX | That's probably more likely than Trump getting elected.                                                                      |
| 2016-10-0812:37:10, Sat | INBOX  | I agree. I think it would actually energize the Republican vote.                                                             |

| 2016-10-0913:24:27, Sun | INBOX  | And I'm HUGE pissed because we found info (via searching Sentinel on an account that came out) that is wildly, hugely relevant to what we're doing. Just sitting there in a field office CYD file. Nobody caring, not interested.\U0001f620\U0001f620\U0001f620\U0001f620\n\nThey're BROKEN, Lisa! Is it going to take some f*cking 9/11 - type event for everybody to stop saying, just coordinate better, have lots of meetings, figure it out? \n\nThe Bu will still recruit cyber people if we have a directorate. We will still recruit people if we can offer them work against cyber criminals, or state actors, or terrorists. |
| 2016-10-0913:29:37, Sun | INBOX  | And dammit, our guys shared it with the TF on Fri (the right thing to do). Challenge is I bet both agency and Fort share it with their seniors Tues AM, if not before.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |

| 2016-10-2400:26:14, Mon | INBOX  | It hasn't hit Google yet! I'll send it when it happens. Maybe 5 min, maybe 2 hours. \n\nBut the article was up a good 30 minutes before you told me. \n\nAre you upset because you thinks this points to you? Because if I waited that (20 minutes 2 hours whatever) time it would be OK? \n\nWhat is it that's making you so angry? Because I simply don't get it.                                                                                 |
| 2016-10-2400:27:59, Mon | OUTBOX | Yeah, and I told you a grand total of 2 minutes after I learned it was up from andy. And you sent it 5 minutes after that. And if you actually read your texts instead of desperately trying to be first, you'll see that us said no, I don't think you should send it.                                                                                                                                                                             |
| 2016-10-2400:29:24, Mon | OUTBOX | I shouldn't have to explain all of this. You knew it was there NOT because of your Google alert, which is totally fair game, but because of ME. I don't know why any of this is so hard to understand.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |

| 2016-10-2400:31:47, Mon | INBOX  | I know that, and haven't said otherwise. \n\nNone of this is hard to understand, which is why I'm asking you why you're so damn angry at this. LITERALLY EVERY OTHER SIGNIFICANT ARTICLE we've treated this way. And the article was out for half an hour. My sending it in no way points to you. \n\nThe fact that everyone is treating this so hush hush differently is part of the problem. |
| 2016-10-2400:33:27, Mon | INBOX  | And I can only take your lack of response to my fury at being accused of betraying your trust as either equal fury on your part or an acknowledgement that you were wrong about that. \n\nI don't treat your trust lightly or carelessly, Lisa. Don't so lightly accuse me of doing so.                                                                                                        |
| 2016-10-2400:34:09, Mon | OUTBOX | I'm done talking about this. No one is treating it all hush hush. Could you stop already? This has nothing to do with the case or the investigative team, and is all about trying to smear a public servant. So how about you withhold judgment about what is actually going on.                                                                                                               |

That's news to me.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| 2016-10-2623:43:55, Wed | OUTBOX | It's not that exactly. Long story, but we're in a real bind re the [REDACTED]And plus, if it's just tdy...                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| 2016-10-2623:45:17, Wed | INBOX  | Bill went through the open to the community bit. But not [REDACTED] ?                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| 2016-10-2623:46:15, Wed | INBOX  | I shouldn't complain, I guess, if it ultimately opens [REDACTED]                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| 2016-10-2623:46:20, Wed | OUTBOX | Beats me. But why are you complaining? [REDACTED][REDACTED] Plus just tdy, right?                                                                                                                                                                                                          |

| 2016-10-2623:49:06, Wed | INBOX  | Just grumbling. Because [REDACTED] should be tdying in hrd or training or something. Just don't think much of him....                                                                                                                                                                          |
| 2016-10-2623:50:43, Wed | INBOX  | So. What made you cranky? Was it not seeing Andy/Eric/[REDACTED] stuff? Something at wrap? \n\nOr just because, no reason needed?                                                                                                                                                              |
| 2016-10-2623:53:05, Wed | OUTBOX | First your overshare re Andy with George, then coming home and [REDACTED][REDACTED], yeah, just everything.                                                                                                                                                                                |
| 2016-10-2700:00:00, Thu | INBOX  | And i hooe you really dont see that as an overshare. Intention was to say we're moving it quickly. Truly it's minor - don't think it's somethig George wouldn't find out, and don't think it slow rolls them. I'll keep up the pressure. \n\nThe others stink, no question about it. I'm sorry |
| 2016-10-2700:06:05, Thu | INBOX  | Interesting - one of the Podesta emails talks about him hosting Peter Kadzik at his house for dinner in Oct, 2015. And in May, 2015, [REDACTED] asked Podesta for a job on the campaign                                                                                                        |

| 2016-11-0221:28:34, Wed | OUTBOX | Gotta go back to kortan.                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| 2016-11-0221:30:33, Wed | OUTBOX | Do you know how to get a cached copy of the version of the article the times pushed out last night re Manafort and foundation?                                                                                                               |
| 2016-11-0221:31:45, Wed | INBOX  | How do you mean? An old version, or without showing current interest in nyt                                                                                                                                                                  |
| 2016-11-0221:32:20, Wed | OUTBOX | Yes. They changed the article dramatically after kortan called, we want to see the old version.                                                                                                                                              |
| 2016-11-0221:34:07, Wed | INBOX  | Hmm. I don't know. Talking with Jon and Bill in hallway let me know when you're done                                                                                                                                                         |
| 2016-11-0221:38:52, Wed | INBOX  | Who's the byline? Let me do some looking                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| 2016-11-0221:45:47, Wed | OUTBOX | Coming back now. Apuzzo plus his buds.                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| 2016-11-0223:48:41, Wed | INBOX  | Getting Mangialardos for next Tues' meeting...and cancelling [REDACTED] I think.                                                                                                                                                             |
| 2016-11-0300:02:10, Thu | OUTBOX | Yeah, bill and to scare talked about getting subs.                                                                                                                                                                                           |
| 2016-11-0300:03:08, Thu | OUTBOX | I suppose I'm okay with cancelling bob. Just this once.                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| 2016-11-0300:08:03, Thu | INBOX  | Bill just called to say George called Bill for an update. Bill tap danced without saying anything. George proposed I update [REDACTED] twice a day. \U0001f612\n\nI told Bill to mention at the meeting tomorrow and come up with an answer. |
| 2016-11-0300:15:15, Thu | OUTBOX | Also a dad is not updating [REDACTED] twice a day. Thanks, but no.                                                                                                                                                                           |
| 2016-11-0300:24:53, Thu | OUTBOX | Also, we are going to have to share with DOJ. There's already not a lot of trust here, and let's face it, [REDACTED] and George are not the problems.                                                                                        |

| 2016-11-0300:26:08, Thu | INBOX  | And no, it's not. I'm not sure anyone should be \n\nl agree with you. When we do it matters, though, and in what detail.                                    |
| 2016-11-0300:26:54, Thu | OUTBOX | I agree. But how much we've gone through and what we've found seems reasonable.                                                                             |
| 2016-11-0300:31:32, Thu | INBOX  | I may have to short someone so as to give Andy and the Director one.                                                                                        |
| 2016-11-0300:36:29, Thu | INBOX  | I'm sure if Dave (or Mike) sees it the Q will be why not them, too. stupid politics.                                                                        |
| 2016-11-0300:36:58, Thu | INBOX  | Or get it for my original plan and do the kiss ass chain of command plan later.                                                                             |
| 2016-11-0300:50:57, Thu | OUTBOX | Sorry. Rybicki called. Time line article in the post is super specific and not good. Doesn't make sense because I didn't have specific information to give. |
| 2016-11-0300:55:50, Thu | INBOX  | What post article?!?                                                                                                                                        |
| 2016-11-0300:56:28, Thu | OUTBOX | Just went up. WaPo.                                                                                                                                         |
| 2016-11-0300:57:08, Thu | INBOX  | Goddamn bills opaque comments.....                                                                                                                          |
| 2016-11-0300:57:36, Thu | OUTBOX | Call you?                                                                                                                                                   |
| 2016-11-0300:57:45, Thu | INBOX  | Can I send to team?                                                                                                                                         |
| 2016-11-0300:57:54, Thu | OUTBOX | Yes                                                                                                                                                         |
| 2016-11-0301:15:38, Thu | OUTBOX | Okay I can talk again.                                                                                                                                      |
| 2016-11-0301:34:00, Thu | INBOX  | Need to talk to you when you're done                                                                                                                        |
| 2016-11-0301:34:27, Thu | OUTBOX | I'm done. But rybicki may call back. But I can talk now.                                                                                                    |
| 2016-11-0301:59:36, Thu | OUTBOX | I hate this case.                                                                                                                                           |
| 2016-11-0302:26:42, Thu | OUTBOX | Sorry, on with rybicki again. Email incoming from him.                                                                                                      |
| 2016-11-0302:39:40, Thu | INBOX  | To me? Didn't get it.                                                                                                                                       |
| 2016-11-0302:40:01, Thu | OUTBOX | You should. Maybe he will in the am.                                                                                                                        |
| 2016-11-0302:40:57, Thu | OUTBOX | Also you can imsg but I might not be able to respond.                                                                                                       |
| 2016-11-0302:42:27, Thu | INBOX  | I didn't. Whatever is fine. I'll imsg in a sec, need to work out timing.                                                                                    |
| 2016-11-0302:43:12, Thu | OUTBOX | It is coming.                                                                                                                                               |
| 2016-11-0302:49:28, Thu | OUTBOX | Ok I should be able to when you are free.                                                                                                                   |

| 2016-11-2719:57:57, Sun | INBOX  | Yep. Meeting with Jon and [REDACTED] and [REDACTED] tomorrow to decide what to talk about, get all the paperwork going.                                                                           |
| 2016-11-2719:59:31, Sun | INBOX  | At which point I'll direct everyone to take the Tuesday daytime flight :D                                                                                                                         |
| 2016-11-2813:01:13, Mon | OUTBOX | [REDACTED] asked me about flight info etc., so at a minimum I expect she'll be flying with us.                                                                                                    |
| 2016-11-2813:06:08, Mon | INBOX  | And boo. That sucks. Should I move my seat so she can grab the one next to yours?                                                                                                                 |
| 2016-11-2813:07:35, Mon | INBOX  | And anticipate that means she will hang on Tues...all expected, I guess, was just hoping for different. \n\nJust got into work, have my standing 830                                              |
| 2016-11-2813:15:35, Mon | OUTBOX | Maybe re Tuesday. She might do touristy things though, since it's been two decades since she was there.                                                                                           |
| 2016-11-2813:24:48, Mon | OUTBOX | [REDACTED] and jon and the rest of them should be encouraged to take another flight though.                                                                                                       |
| 2016-11-2901:45:21, Tue | INBOX  | Hey do you know why Bill was talking to Jim?                                                                                                                                                      |
| 2016-11-2901:46:45, Tue | INBOX  | I'll try and find out, re Bill. A bit concerning.                                                                                                                                                 |
| 2016-11-2901:48:38, Tue | OUTBOX | Also, jason herring spoke to me tonight about needing to get the andy letters out to congress. I need to prioritize those ASAP. Like have to be done and finalized before I can leave. \U0001f612 |

| 2016-12-1017:42:20, Sat | INBOX           | Had an hour long convo with Bill. Talked about the meeting (they had it at DoJ, Bill, Jim and Jon), expressed our frustration, Bill responded. Talked about [redacted] and WFO SAC job, what I expected, [redacted] and [redacted] saying [redacted] which is fine, you know the conflicted way I feel about that but it is what it is. Mike said something super irritating to Bill, essentially, Pete briefs well but he needs more time to demonstrate his ability to manage. Bill said he thought that was just a fig leaf for saying [redacted] but it aggravates me. I'm sorry, I'm not briefing what someone tells me, I'm briefing what I'm doing. And I'm managing (for the case) a ton of people in various divisions and multiple agencies and foreign governments. Not to mention the issues I've briefed you on and am managing for cd3, etc. I do think it's a fig leaf, but have the balls to say, Pete, you're doing a great job. Keep it up. You've just gotten promoted, twice, and we need you as a DAD where you can do good: embrace that role. DON'T tell me, you brief well but you need to show me some more management skill. F you. I manage my ass off every goddamn day in this sh*tstorm, and keep the branch running to boot. | mms  |

Thus came up in the context of bill asking about a term for [REDACTED] who deserves it, and Bill was told no. I assume that would be a different answer for [REDACTED]. So I need to talk to [REDACTED] to see if he'd be interested in an SC job in CD, because he'd be better than 95% of the candidates we have putting in. Even though we can't get a term for [REDACTED]. | 2016-12-1018:03:59, Sat | OUTBOX          | That's a different conversation, and one he can have not in this context. Or even better, one YOU should have with Andy. It would be more meaningful that way anyway. "Andy, I'm not putting in for sac, but where do you see me... Especially since I heard criticism of me from Mike which I didn't think was fair, wanted to make sure you didn't think that was widely thought..." | sms  |

I don't want to live constantly straddling two worlds.                                                                                                                                                                                                             | sms  |
| 2017-05-2400:02:12, Wed | INBOX           | That's a very valid concern. You truly will never get this time back, ever.\n\nAnd I have no way to predict what the schedule will look like. The only thing I can tell you is the best predictor is there past, and both Bob and Aaron are tremendous Workaholics. Both demanding.                                        | sms  |
| 2017-05-2400:02:49, Wed | INBOX           | Have you had a conversation with Aaron about what his hours have been like this past week? If he's working until 9 or 10, that says something. If they're all leaving at 6, that says another.                                                                                                                             | sms  |
| 2017-05-2400:03:51, Wed | INBOX           | My worry is that all these attorneys that they're bringing from the private sector will be used to long hours, because they're used to law firm salaries. They won't mind missing the money, but will bring that same expectation of long long hours.                                                                      | sms  |

I don't have a great feeling about the big bureau right now and my role (and others perception of that) in it, and the SC seems like a tangible, worthwhile effort to do before I retire. | sms  |

| 2017-06-0101:23:35, Thu | INBOX           | Is Andy truly accepting of the fact of the potential limitations that he may not be DD as long as he thought, and regardless, that we'll have a new D, as all this unfolds?\n\nBtw, Bill said he heard some guy in INSD was ranked #2 for the job. Someone we interviewed for a SC job in CD and turned down. Truly I don't know wtf is going on. Do I have cognitive dissonance?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | sms  |
| 2017-06-0101:44:36, Thu | INBOX           | Look, here's the bottom line as best as I can sum up (and I hope you already know all this)\n\n- I don't think Andy's acting in bad faith. I do think what he hypothetically proposes isn't something in his thought process or skillset or his available time and ability. In other words, when JG or Randy or even Bob said they had a plan, they had a PLAN. I don't think Andy does. And as A/D that's something too small for him to worry about. To put a fine point on it [REDACTED] Wtf. Such a pin to the balloon of faith and confidence in the system. \n\n- I knew my standing with Comey and Andy. One is gone, the other uncertain at best. \n\n- I don't trust/believe in my standing with Dave and Carl and the rest of the EADs.\n\n- the SC is straightforward and rewarding, meaningful, honorable and a known quantity. It would cement my image as the "special project guy" or "glorified case agent" (nevermind they'll never see [REDACTED] that way for doing the same job less well). I guess I'm feeling like I don't care about that right now. But it's not like I have a long time left. | sms  |

| 2017-06-0110:09:59, Thu | INBOX           | Hi. \n\nThe only additional thought I had is it's not tenable to have both me and [REDACTED] here. If he's in charge and I'm around, it undermines him (because Mueller and Aaron will be looking to me), it puts me in a horrible position, and it's a waste of Bureau resources. I told Bill that, but in don't know that will get up from him thru Carl to Andy.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | sms  |

| 2017-06-0110:16:51, Thu | OUTBOX          | I'm growing more doubtful about my role staying on. For the same reason you're not absolutely essential once 30 or 45 days is up, I'm not absolutely essential. You don't need someone to see around corners and check for pitfalls when you have the most all-star of all-star teams. I mean sure, might a catch a ball or two? Maybe. But not like the value I add at HQ when it's mostly not all-stars.                                                                                                                                                                                             | sms  |

| 2017-06-0110:21:01, Thu | INBOX           | I hear you. But a couple of things. First, I really truly believe you're not giving yourself enough credit for how good you are. Depends on what you want. At the Bu, you'll be a superstar amongst mostly not all-stars. There, you're a superstar amongst superstars.Second, be really honest, what is your future at the Bureau? As long as Andy is A/D, you're in a weird place with JR and [REDACTED] I don't know what his future is when a D is confirmed. Nor do I know Bakers future. After that, Mueller and the bright attorneys will drive it, not me.                                                                                                   | sms  |

BUT, because you're an attorney, this is an entirely different developmental opportunity. This helps you immeasurably in your future legal career. | sms  |

They're not associated with the team, and I may need to say "no." I'll do research and talk with her but I worry they're NY, in the same way Andrew worried about NY agents. And he had the sense to talk to me about what he wanted, and balance his request against those already on the team.\nD) curious the comment Andrew made as I stepped out, prompting your 20 year agent comment. My sense was he wasn't necessarily happy | mms  |
| 2017-06-0709:59:50, Wed | OUTBOX          | [REDACTED] C) So just sit down and talk to her honestly about it. It's okay to say no, especially since that subject NEEDS a strong CI look as well.\nD) Jesus, relax about the comment. Andrew had been making fun of himself, you stepped out to make a call, Andrew said oh no, I've scared him. I said you're a 20 year agent, you're fine. It was all a joke. That's it.                                                                                                                                                            | sms  |
