World Liberty Financial Inc.

Dear Mr. Witkoff:

The Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations (“PSI” or “the Subcommittee”) is conducting a preliminary inquiry into potential conflicts of interest and violations of the law from President Trump’s cryptocurrency ventures, including World Liberty Financial Inc. (WLFI) and associated businesses’ financial dealings with foreign nationals, foreign governments, and other cryptocurrency firms.

Recent reports indicate that WLFI may be enabling the violation of government ethics requirements, seeking investments from foreign governments, facilitating financial transactions with foreign nationals under federal prosecution, and potentially violating federal laws, including the foreign emoluments clause of the Constitution.<sup>1</sup> I therefore write to request information and records regarding the ownership and financial structure of WLFI, investments in its cryptocurrency operations and agreements with other cryptocurrency firms, and the steps that you have taken to address the potential for significant conflicts of interest or national security risks posed by this business venture.

World Liberty Financial launched in September 2024 with the promise of “driving the mass adoption of stablecoins and decentralized finance.”<sup>2</sup> Rather than initially offering a cryptocurrency, its first venture was a ‘governance token’<sup>3</sup> that has been described as a

“symbolic tool for participation” that does “little to empower holders with meaningful influence” in WLFI, and that cannot be bought or transferred on the market.<sup>4</sup> Perhaps because of this limited financial or operational value, the governance token languished, only raising $2.7 million by the end of October and missing sales targets until Justin Sun, co-founder of blockchain project TRON, invested $30 million to help WLFI meet its goal.<sup>5</sup> Finally, in March 2025, WLFI announced its plans for a cryptocurrency, a stablecoin branded USD1 that would be redeemable one-to-one for the US dollar.<sup>6</sup>

While WLFI has not yet launched a tradeable cryptocurrency, it has reaped substantial financial benefits for its founders and the Trump family. The founding document for WLFI’s governance token lists President Trump as the firm’s “Chief Crypto Advocate,” with his sons Eric, Donald Jr., and Barron as “Web3 Ambassador(s),” as well as your father Steve Witkoff as a “Co-Founder.”<sup>7</sup> The Trump family took even greater control over WLFI during the President’s inauguration, asserting a claim over 75% of net revenues from token sales and 60% from the firm’s operations.<sup>8</sup> Bolstered by its connections to the re-elected President, WLFI started attracting new attention from investors after the election, raising $550 million from its governance token, with half of those investors spending more than a million dollars.<sup>9</sup>

President Trump’s financial ties to WLFI allow and invite anyone in the world, including foreign governments and unscrupulous individuals, to directly enrich the President and his family, while hiding potential payoffs in the pseudonymity of the blockchain. This threat is not hypothetical: WLFI has already received significant investments from foreign nationals and governments, including individuals under federal prosecution and companies that have been found guilty of violating anti-money laundering and sanctions laws.<sup>10</sup> Indeed, WLFI executives have flown across the world seeking partnerships and investment from foreign governments,

- Justin Sun, who has invested $75 million in WLFI and recently announced that his TRON blockchain would be a partner on USD1.<sup>12</sup> Sun is currently facing a civil fraud case from the Securities and Exchange Commission over allegations of market manipulation and unregistered asset sales, which he is attempting to favorably settle after President Trump's SEC paused litigation.<sup>13</sup> Reporting indicates that TRON has become a preferred payment platform for Hamas and Hezbollah to evade U.S. sanctions.<sup>14</sup> Indeed, according to forensic analysts, 58% of all identified, illicit activity involving crypto in 2024 happened on the TRON blockchain.<sup>15</sup> included knowingly facilitating nearly $900 million in transactions that violated U.S. sanctions and concealing those transfers.<sup>18</sup>

- DWF Labs, a Dubai-based cryptocurrency firm that has invested $25 million in WLFI's governance token, making it one of its largest holders.<sup>19</sup> DWF Labs has been suspected of engaging in market manipulation by creating a false impression of trading on its cryptocurrencies to drive up sale and interest.<sup>20</sup> Additionally, DWF Lab's management previously managed Russian firms accused of enabling Russian banks to bypass sanctions, in addition to having other ties to Russian banks.<sup>21</sup>

Moreover, according to the New York Times, WLFI has attempted to enrich itself and bolster its own offerings through secretive partnerships intended to create the appearance of investor demand and provide it preferential terms for other cryptocurrency projects.<sup>22</sup> Reportedly, WLFI used the Trump name to solicit substantial investments from cryptocurrency startups, asking for between $10 million and $30 million in investment in its governance token, while WLFI would buy a smaller amount of the startup's offerings in return—pocketing the difference for itself.<sup>23</sup> Although the startup would be able to use WLFI's investment to burnish its own credibility, there appears to be no disclosure to consumers about the payment for the endorsement deal.<sup>24</sup> According to the Times, WLFI struck at least five deals with other cryptocurrency firms.<sup>25</sup>

WLFI's financial entanglements with President, his family, and the Trump Administration present unprecedented conflicts of interest and national security risks, including potential violations of the foreign emoluments clause.<sup>26</sup> President Trump has used the federal government to enrich cryptocurrency firms through the creation of a Strategic Bitcoin Reserve and United States Digital Asset Stockpile, and used the White House to promote cryptocurrencies (including
